EDITORIAL NOTE

The letters are arranged in chronological sequence. The layout follows as closely as possible that of the original letters. The editor has preserved the spelling, punctuation, and grammar of the original letters, including capital letters. Letters containing passages in foreign languages are also reproduced with spellings and accents exactly as in the manuscripts.

Editorial interpolations are inserted between square brackets

[. . .] indicates material that has been obliterated. This was due to the storage of the letters on a spike or to an occasional tear in the paper. All the seals have been cut off, which has also removed some words, and accounts for words missing when they were scribbled on the outside of the paper around the seal.

No words are illegible.
