

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

STEVE MARQUARDT is a researcher with the AFL-CIO's Center for Strategic Research. He is finishing his doctoral dissertation in history at the University of Washington, entitled "'Green Havoc': Environment, Labor, and the State in Costa Rica's Pacific Banana Industry, 1938–1962."

BEN FALLAW completed his Ph.D. in Latin American history at the University of Chicago in 1995 and is currently an assistant professor at Colby College. His first book, Cárdenas Compromised: The Failure of Reform in Yucatán, was recently published by Duke University Press. He is now working on a history of Yucatecan Socialism from the Mexican Revolution to the Maximato.

A sociologist, CESAR AYALA teaches in the Department of Latin American and Puerto Rican Studies, Lehman College–CUNY. He wrote American Sugar Kingdom: The Plantation Economy of the Spanish Caribbean, 1898–1934.

LAIRD W. BERGAD is a professor in the Ph.D. Program in History and Director of the Center for Latin American, Caribbean, and Latino Studies at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. He has written on slavery and plantation societies in the Caribbean and Brazil.

MARCIA STEPHENSON is Associate Professor of Spanish and Interim Director of Women's Studies at Purdue University. She wrote Gender and Modernity in Andean Bolivia. Currently, she is working on a book manuscript on indigenous epistemologies in twentieth-century Bolivia.

JACQUELINE BIXLER is Professor of Spanish at Virginia Tech. A specialist in Latin American theatre, she has published a book on Mexican dramatist Emilio Carballido entitled Convention and Transgression: The Theatre of Emilio Carballido as well as numerous articles on Mexican, Argentine, and Chilean theatre.

ALAN KNIGHT is Professor of the History of Latin America and Director of the Latin American Centre, Oxford University. He wrote The Mexican Revolution as well as numerous articles and essays on Mexican history. He recently completed two volumes of a three-volume history of Mexico to be published by Cambridge University Press.

RAUI L. MADRID is Assistant Professor in the Department of Government at the University of Texas at Austin. He is finishing a book manuscript entitled "Retiring the State: The Politics of Pension Privatization in Latin America."

PAMELA K. STARR is a professor of international studies at the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México (ITAM), where she specializes in the politics of economic policy in Latin America. She coedited Markets and Democracy in Latin America (1999) and has written widely on the politics of economic reform and exchange-rate regimes in Latin America, the impact of international markets, and Latin American politics and economics. She is currently writing a book on the politics of dollarization in Latin America.

MICHAEL DODSON is Professor of political science at Texas Christian University, where he teaches political theory and comparative politics. His current research focuses on efforts to strengthen human rights protections and to promote the rule of law in Central America. His recent research articles have appeared in the Journal of Latin American Studies, the Bulletin of Latin American Research, and Human Rights Review.

DAVID KAIMOWITZ is Director General of the Center for International Forestry Research (CIFOR) in Bogor, Indonesia. He has written extensively on the causes of deforestation, forest-related policies in Latin America, and the role of municipal governments in natural resource management.

A cultural historian of Mexico, JAMES KRIPPNER-MARTINEZ is Associate Professor of history at Haverford College. He wrote Rereading the Conquest: Power, Politics, and the History of Early-Colonial Michoacán, Mexico, 1521–1565, published recently by Penn State University Press.

JOEL WOLFE is an associate professor of history at Rice University. At present, he is writing a book that uses the history of the automobile to reexamine twentieth-century Brazil through the lenses of geography, technology, and consumerism. It is tentatively titled “Autos and Progress: Technology, Consumerism, and Work in Brazil.”

CHRISTINE HUNEFELDT is a professor in the Department of History at the University of California, San Diego. Her publications include Paying the Price of Freedom and Liberalism in the Bedroom (2000).