Law and Economics of International Telecommunications

The traditional system of international telecommunications is undergoing fundamental changes caused by new technologies and new public policies on the national and international levels. The legal and economic issues underlying this process of privatization, deregulation and re-regulation are the subject of studies undertaken at the Max Planck Institute in Hamburg, in cooperation with scholars from America, Asia and Europe. The series »Law and Economics of International Telecommunications« is dedicated to the publication of these studies. Comprising reports from representative countries that analyse the interface of national and international telecommunications systems, it deals with point-to-point communications, broadcasting and the »new media«. Further studies will deal with key policy issues including the protection of privacy and the role of international organizations, particularly the European Economic Communities, the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) and the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (INTELSAT).

30 -YEAR INDEX TO PERIODICAL ARTICLES RELATED TO LAW

ROY M. MERSKY,

Hyder Centennial Professor of Law and Law Librarian, The University of Texas and

J. MYRON JACOBSTEIN,

Professor of Law and Law Librarian,
Stanford University, retired.

The new INDEX cumulates 30 years of articles appearing in over 1200 periodicals important to the legal researcher.

Started in 1958, the INDEX is geared to the interaction of law and other disciplines, indexing materials related to law in fields such as political science, sociology, international affairs and medicine. It uses legal subject headings and brings together articles that are scattered throughout other indexing services or not indexed at all.

Articles are selected from journals not in the Current Law Index, the Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals, or the Index to Legal Periodicals.

The 30-Year Index, covering 1958-1988, cumulates all previous editions. Supplements are issued four times each year with the last issue cumulative.
