

---

About the Authors

---

Leanne Fital Alarid is Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology/Criminal Justice and Criminology at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. She received her Ph.D. in criminal justice from Sam Houston State University in 1996. She has published manuscripts in Justice Quarterly, Journal of Research in Crime and Delinquency, Journal of Correctional Health Care, The Prison Journal, and Policing. Her other current research interests include community policing, diversity issues in corrections, and correctional health policy related to HIV/AIDS knowledge and risk behavior.

Mark Atlas is on the faculty of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at North Carolina State University, where he specializes in environmental policy. Before entering academia, he was an environmental attorney in Washington, D.C., for many years. In his work with environmental consulting firms, he assisted the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in developing and enforcing its policies. In private practice, he represented major corporations and trade associations.

James J. Brudney is Newton D. Baker-Baker & Hostetler Chair in Law and Fellow in the Center for Law, Policy, and Social Science at The Ohio State University. His research interests include labor and employment law and the relationship between courts and legislatures.

Corey Ditslear is a Ph.D. candidate in Political Science, with subfield concentrations in judicial politics and gender politics, and a member of the Center for Law, Policy, and Social Science at The Ohio State University.

Inga Markovits holds the "Friends of Jamail" Regents' Chair in Law at the University of Texas in Austin. She is particularly interested in the impact of ideology on law and in its reflection in everyday legal experience. Her book Imperfect Justice: An East-West German Diary examined the replacement of a socialist by a capitalist judiciary in the context of Germany's reunification. She is currently working on a local history of East German law that traces the rise and fall of a totalitarian legal system in the records of one East German trial court and in interviews with the court's staff and its clients.

Paul A. Passavant is a visiting fellow at the School of Law, Birkbeck College, and an Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science, Hobart and William Smith College. He is the author of many essays on rights, culture, and free speech. His book Freedom of Speech and the Paradox of Rights is forthcoming from New York University Press.

Evan J. Ringquist is a professor in the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at Indiana University. He is the author of Environmental Protection at the State Level (1993), Contemporary Regulatory Policy (2000), and more than two dozen refereed articles and book chapters. Professor Ringquist has also received grants from the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Department of Energy and has served as a consultant to numerous agencies at all levels of government.

Hsiao-Ming Wang is Assistant Professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at the University of Houston-Downtown. He received his Ph.D. in criminal justice from Sam Houston State University in 1998. He has published in the International Journal of the Sociology of Law, Social Justice, and Policing. His research interests include comparative criminal justice systems, white-collar crime, policing, and security management.