

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

MICHAEL BARKUN, Associate Professor of Political Science at Syracuse University, held a fellowship from the Ford Foundation in Political Science during the 1970-1971 academic year and has been engaged in research on millenarian movements. He is currently at work on a comparative study of millenarian movements as the consequences of disaster. He has published a number of articles in the field of law and social science and is coauthor of International Law and the Social Sciences (Princeton University Press, 1970). He served as coeditor of The United Nations System and Its Functions (Van Nostrand, 1968) and is the author of Law without Sanctions: Order in Primitive Societies and the World Community (Yale University Press, 1968). He is also editor of a forthcoming volume, Law and the Social System (Aldine • Atherton).

DAVID H. BAYLEY holds a professorship in the Graduate School of International Studies at the University of Denver. His fields of specialization are comparative politics, international relations, and India. His professional activities have included serving as a staff consultant to the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence and member of the selection committee of the American Institute of Indian Studies. For the past year he has been a participant in the Social Science Research Council's Seminar on State and Nation Building in Europe. His books include The Role of the Police in a Developing Nation: India (Princeton University Press, 1969) and—as coauthor with Prof. Harold Mendelsohn — Minorities and the Police (The Free Press, 1969).

FORREST DILL is a research sociologist at the Center on Administration of Criminal Justice, School of Law, University of California at Davis. He is currently engaged in research on the organizational consequences of a state subsidy to county probation agencies in California and is preparing a study on the movement to reform the American bail system.

HERBERT JACOB, a political scientist, is a Professor at Northwestern University and has served as Treasurer and member of the Board of Directors of the Law and Society Association. He has published numerous articles concerned with political issues, the administration of justice, and the judiciary. His books include Elementary Political Analysis (McGraw-Hill, 1970), Debtors in Court (Rand McNally, 1969), and Justice in America (Little, Brown, 1965; second ed., 1971).

MARTIN A. LEVIN is Assistant Professor at Brandeis University and has served as Executive Director of that institution's Urban Policy Fellowship Program. During 1970-1971 he also held a fellowship under the Small Grant Program of the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice of the Law Enforcement Administration for a study on "The Impact of Criminal Court Sentencing Decisions on Recidivism Rates." His publications include "Urban Politics and Policy Outputs" in Urban Politics: A Systems Approach (The Free Press, 1971; Morgan and Kirkpatrick, eds.) and a forthcoming book, Urban Politics and the Criminal Courts (Harvard University Press, 1971).

STUART S. NAGEL, Law and Social Science Fellow at the Yale Law School Russell Sage Program, has been on leave as Professor of Political Science at the University of Illinois. He is the author of The Legal Process from a Behavioral Perspective and is currently writing a book entitled Effects of Alternative Legal Policies.

HENRY P. SCHROERLUKE, a member of the California Bar, came to the law from the ministry. He has served as an active minister in various churches in California and as a U.S. Marine Corps chaplain in Korea. He took part in a study of police practices conducted by the Center for the Study of Law and Society, University of California at Berkeley, and has also worked with the Contra Costa Legal Services Foundation in Richmond, California.

HARRY P. STUMPF is Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, University of New Mexico. His fields of special interest are judicial politics and behavior and American government and politics. He was Project Director for the Study of OEO Legal Service Programs in the California Bay Area and has authored and coauthored a number of articles and book reviews. One of his articles, "The First Trial of Tijerina," will appear in the forthcoming book, The Political Trial (Bobbs-Merrill; Theodore L. Becker, ed.). His most recent work is Justice and the Poor: The Politics of the Legal Services Program, to be published by Sage.