ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

COLIN CAMPBELL is Professor of Jurisprudence in the Faculty of Law, The Queen's University of Belfast. He is a member of the International Sociological Association Research Committee on Sociology of Law, and a co-editor of the Law in Society series of books.

MALCOLM M. FEELEY is currently a Research Fellow in the Guggenheim Criminal Justice Program at the Yale Law School and Research Associate and Lecturer at Yale's Institution for Social and Policy Studies, and will be joining the Department of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin in January 1977. He has published several articles on law and social control and is currently completing a study of lower criminal courts.

LAWRENCE B. MOHR is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science and Associate Research Scientist in the Institute of Public Policy Studies at the University of Michigan. He has published on several topics in organization theory and is currently concentrating on organizational innovation and the evaluation of public programs.

PHILIPPE NONET is Associate Professor of Sociology, and a member of the staff of the Center for the Study of Law and Society at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of Administrative Justice: Advocacy and Change in a Government Agency (1969).

FRANK UPHAM has worked and studied in Taiwan, Southeast Asia, and Japan and speaks and reads Chinese and Japanese. He graduated from Harvard Law School in 1974 and is now an Assistant Attorney General in the Consumer Protection Division of the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office where he does civil and criminal litigation.

PAUL WILES is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law and the Center for Criminological Studies at the University of Sheffield. He is co-editor, with Colin Campbell, of the Law in Society series published by Martin Robertson and Co. of London. His previous publications are mostly on criminology or the methodology of the social sciences, and he is review editor of the British Journal of Criminology.