

NEW!

FOR HISTORY OF AMERICAN EDUCATION

THE TRANSIT OF LEARNING: A Social and Cultural Interpretation of American Educational History

by Edward J. Power, Boston College

Intended for courses in the history of U.S. education, this work combines social and cultural influence with educational purpose; and it stresses historical interpretations through investigation of why certain educational action was taken. The family, religion, philosophy of education, and private enterprise are four institutions discussed throughout the book. The three main divisions of American educational history (Colonial period, National period, and the 20th Century) are given equal treatment.

504 pages

$10.95 (tent.)/softcover

0-88284-073-8

Also from Alfred . . .

SOCIAL FORCES IN EDUCATION

by Mary E. Bredemeier, Montclair State College
and Harry C. Bredemeier, Rutgers University

An introduction to the field of education, this text cites current research and literature as well as first hand knowledge to demonstrate how our educational systems work and how they might be improved. By placing the behavior of students, teachers and administrators within a larger social setting, the authors demonstrate where and how change is possible for education in America.

391 pages

$12.95/hardcover

0-88284-052-5

To receive a complimentary examination copy, please write for one including course title, enrollment and decision date to:

ALFRED PUBLISHING CO., INC.
Attn: Marketing Dept.
15335 Morrison Street
Sherman Oaks, CA 91403

