Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and the Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, in triplicate, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing, footnotes being placed at the end of the article; preferably conform to the styling of The China Quarterly; and normally not exceed 8-10,000 words in length. Submission of a manuscript is taken to imply that it has not previously been published and that it is not currently being considered elsewhere.

The China Quarterly is published by the Contemporary China Institute of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the Contemporary China Institute.

The Cambridge History of China

Volume 12: Republican China 1912-1949, Part 1

Edited by JOHN K. FAIRBANK

This is the first of two volumes of this authoritative Cambridge history which review the Republican period in China. Political development and events are traced until 1928: Volume 13 will complete the historical coverage.

'It is the great merit of the series that, while it presents the latest scholarship, it can be read or dipped into by anyone interested in China.'

Science and Civilisation in China

Volume VI: Biology and Biological Technology

JOSEPH NEEDHAM

Part II: Agriculture

FRANCESCA BRAY

This second part of the sixth volume of Joseph Needham's great enterprise is the first to be written by a collaborator. Francesca Bray, working closely with Joseph Needham, and drawing on her own first-hand research in China, has produced the most comprehensive study of Chinese agriculture to be published in the West.

Agriculture in China's Modern Economic Development

NICHOLAS R. LARDY

This book explores the relationship between the Chinese peasantry and the state-led economic system established by the Communist Party after 1949. It seeks to explain how state policies have affected the growth of agricultural productivity and the rise of peasant income, and asks how effectively agriculture has supplied food for urban consumption and contributed to the rise of modern industry.

Food Grain Procurement and Consumption in China

KENNETH R. WALKER

This book discusses the attempts of the Chinese government to supply its population with adequate grain from 1953 to 1980, as demand rose steeply with improving standards of living. The author examines the grain market and the grain rationing and procurement policy, involving transfers from surplus to deficit areas; and the historic decision to import grain.
