

THE HELLENIC SOCIETY

The Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies was founded in 1879 to advance the study of Greek language, literature, history and art. It maintains in London, jointly with the Roman Society and in association with the Institute of Classical Studies of the University of London, a library of some 30,000 volumes, and a large collection of lantern slides. Both books and slides can be sent to members by post. Meetings with lectures are held in London four times a year and in various parts of the country in collaboration with local associations. The Journal of Hellenic Studies is recognised as one of the foremost British periodicals in the field of classical scholarship. It contains articles on a wide range of subjects, illustrations and book reviews.

The Journal and the Archaeological Reports are sent free to members. The annual subscription to the Society is £2. For information about the Society write to the Secretary, The Hellenic Society, 31-34 Gordon Square, London, W.C.1.

THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ATHENS

The British School of Archaeology at Athens was founded in 1886 to provide British students of the language, literature, history, religion, archaeology and art of Greece from prehistoric times to the present day with facilities for research and travel in Greek lands. The School premises in Athens house the Penrose Library and the Finlay Library, which together cover every aspect of Greek studies, ancient and modern. Accommodation is available in the School for postgraduate students and senior scholars during the Session, from October until the end of June. Other students and teachers of Classics, visiting Greece for shorter periods, can be accommodated during July and August. The School also maintains a Dig-house in Crete, at Knossos, which serves as a base for excavations and for students engaged in research.

The School accepts, as a matter of course, holders of studentships and travelling fellowships from all Universities of the Commonwealth, and students sent out by the Royal Institute of British Architects and other similar bodies. A School Studentship is offered in turn to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and to the University of London every third year. Other Students are appointed on the Macmillan and Sachs endowments.

The School has sponsored or undertaken many excavations in Greek lands. The most important since the war have been conducted at Knossos, Mycenae, Old Smyrna and on Chios. The results of these excavations are published in the Annual of the British School at Athens, and full preliminary reports on them appear in the Archaeological Reports. Both the Annual and the Reports are sent free to subscribers of £4 per annum.

For information about the School, write to the Secretary, The British School at Athens, 31-34 Gordon Square, London, W.C.1.
