Divine and Contingent Order

Thomas F. Torrance

'This important new book... is intended for scientists as much as for theologians and is certainly demanding reading for either... No reader who engages seriously with his argument can think in quite the same way again.'
British Book News. £9.50

The Divine Inspiration of Holy Scripture

William J. Abraham

This book aims to provide an account of divine inspiration that is contemporary and credible. The classical and current options fail because of the endemic tendency to confuse inspiration with revelation. Dr Abraham provides a theory of inspiration which can absorb critical conclusions without strain, which does justice to the teaching of the Bible itself on inspiration, and yet reflects the central theological concerns of the Reformers and John Wesley. £9.50

New Testament Textual Criticism

Its Significance for Exegesis

Essays in Honour of Bruce M. Metzger

Edited by Eldon Jay Epp and Gordon D. Fee

This volume is a collection of essays by leading textual critics, in which they apply their art and science to specific problems of textual variation in the Greek New Testament and to issues of textual transmission and translation. Overall, the focus is on the significance of text-critical studies for the exegesis of the New Testament. £40

Religion and Imagination

'in aid of a grammar of assent'

John Coulson

To show how religion and imagination are related to each other, this book begins with the traditional overlap of religion and literature, and with such questions as: 'How can I believe what I cannot understand or absolutely prove? How does an impression on the imagination become a system or creed in the reason?' £12.50

Religion in Sociological Perspective

Bryan Wilson

In this book Bryan Wilson traces the dominant contours of religion as perceived by the sociologist. His themes range from the study of sectarianism, on which he is one of the world's leading authorities, to the subtleties of the relationship between religion and culture in modern societies of the West and the East. £8.50 paperback £3.95

An Introduction to the Philosophy of Religion

Brian Davies, OP

Does rational enquiry show religious doctrines to be false, incoherent, or meaningless? Are there logical arguments for thinking that God exists or does not exist? And what, in any case, does 'God' mean? This book examines critically the way in which these and similar problems have been treated in the past by philosophers such as Aquinas, Descartes, Leibniz, Hume, and Kant, and more recently by modern thinkers from Wittgenstein to Anthony Kenny and Bernard Williams. £9.95 paperback £3.95 OPUS

The Cosmic Christ in Origen and Teilhard de Chardin

A Comparative Study

J. A. Lyons, S.J.

Two characteristics of Christianity today are attempts to relate the faith to the ever-increasing scientific knowledge of our time and a concentration of interest and devotion on the person of Christ. These two concerns, ostensibly very different, come together in the term 'Cosmic Christ'. This book traces the development of that term from its beginnings in the Germany of the 1830s to the present day. £13.50 Oxford Theological Monographs

Hamann on Language and Literature

Terence J. German, S.J.

This work presents Johann Georg Hamann's thoughts concerning language and religion. There has been a renaissance of interest in Hamann and his works in Germany since the 1950s, culminating in the First Congress devoted to him held in Germany in 1976. He not only deserves the credit received by his fellow Germans but he also deserves to be more widely known. £12.50 Oxford Theological Monographs

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. Contributions and books for review should be sent to the Editor, Professor H. D. Lewis, King's College, Strand, London, WC2R 2LS.
2. Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 5,000 and 10,000 words long, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two or more parts may occasionally be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible. They should normally be in English.
3. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere.
4. Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing, preferably on A4 paper, with a wide left-hand margin. The typescript should be prepared to accord as closely as possible with the typographical conventions of the journal.
5. Footnotes should be used sparingly: in general, to give sources of direct quotations, references to main authorities on disputable questions, and evidence relied on for a new or unusual conclusion. They should be numbered in one sequence throughout the article, and should preferably be typed in double spacing at the end of the article.
6. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
7. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where necessary, within ten days of receiving them.
8. Correction should be kept to an absolute minimum. It should be confined to errors of the typist or printer unless the Editor authorises otherwise.
9. All contributors of articles receive 50 free offprints. Reviewers will receive five or more offprints of their reviews.
10. If rejected manuscripts are to be returned, stamps or international coupons should be sent to cover postage, but it would normally be simpler just to retain a copy.
11. Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyrights, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
