

About our contributors

Ian Hamnett

who lectures in the Department of Sociology at the University of Bristol, has been the Project Editor of this issue. His last contribution to New Blackfriars was his broadcast talk 'A Mistake About Error' (Feb. 1986).

W.S.F. Pickering

lectures in sociology in the University of Newcastle upon Tyne; he is also an Anglican priest. He has written extensively on Durkheim and is a frequent contributor to New Blackfriars. For ten years he was principal organizer of the Oxford Symposium on Sociology and Theology.

Kieran Flanagan

is a lecturer in sociology at the University of Bristol. The sociology of liturgy has been a particular interest of his for some years. He wrote for last June's New Blackfriars 'To be a Sociologist and a Catholic: A Reflection'.

Adrian Cunningham

lectures in the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Lancaster and is the editor of Religion. He was a contributor to Slant.

Peter McCaffery

is a lecturer in the Department of Sociology at the University of Aberdeen. He has studied the role of opinion-forming groups in modern Catholicism.

Frances P. McHugh

lectures in sociology and social ethics in St. John's Diocesan Seminary, at Wonersh in Surrey. He has been studying the social role of Catholicism in modern Britain.

George Carey

who had extensive experience in the North East as an Anglican parish priest and prison chaplain, is now Principal of Trinity College, Bristol.

Anthony Archer OP

whose book stimulated the discussion in this special issue, practised as a lawyer before he became a Dominican and a priest. It was during his years at St Dominic's Priory, Newcastle, that he researched and wrote the thesis which became a central part of his book. He is now Prior of Holy Cross Priory, Leicester.