Fight cancer
with will power.

When it comes to your will, your family and loved ones come first. But after everyone in your life has been well provided for, we ask that you give some thought to leaving a bequest to the Canadian Cancer Society. While much of the Society's funds come from regular donations, a significant amount comes from bequests made in wills. The money is used to support the Society's on-going programs in research, public education and patient services. No matter what the size of the bequest, we need your support. So when the time comes, please remember: a strong will can go a long way in the fight against cancer.
