

CHIEF JUSTICESHIPS OF THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT

The Chief Justiceship of John Marshall, 1801-1835

Herbert A. Johnson

"Unquestionably a contribution that will be of interest and use to students of the Supreme Court...Few scholars have as thorough a mastery of the Marshall Court as Professor Johnson, and it shows throughout the book."

American Indian Sovereignty and the U.S. Supreme Court
The Masking of Justice
By David E. Wilkins

"This book offers a framework in which Supreme Court decisions can be analyzed and criticized. It is, on account of this framework, a wholly new kind of writing and one that is badly needed."

—Vine DeLoria Jr., author of American Indians, American Justice

"Like the miner's canary, the Indian marks the shift from fresh air to poison gas in our political atmosphere; and our treatment of Indians, even more than our treatment of other minorities, reflects the rise and fall in our democratic faith," wrote Felix S. Cohen, an early expert in Indian legal affairs.

In this book, Wilkins charts the "fall in our democratic faith" through fifteen landmark cases in which the Supreme Court significantly curtailed Indian rights. He offers compelling evidence that Supreme Court justices selectively used precedents and facts, both historical and contemporary, to arrive at decisions that have undermined tribal sovereignty, legitimized massive tribal land losses, sanctioned the diminishment of Indian religious rights, and curtailed other rights as well.

These case studies — and their implications for all minority groups — make important and troubling reading at a time when the Supreme Court is at the vortex of political and moral developments that are redefining the nature of American government, transforming the relationship between the legal and political branches, and altering the very meaning of federalism.

The Laws of the Hittites

A Critical Edition

Harry Angier Hoffner, Jr.

The first critical edition of the Hittite laws since 1959, containing much new textual material. Presents manuscripts in the "score" format, distinguishing Old Hittite from later copies, and based upon a fresh collation of the original tablets. The commentary examines the linguistic, jurisprudential and cultural aspects of the laws against the background of the entire Hittite textual corpus, archaeological data, and other Ancient Near Eastern law corpora. In addition the volume contains a concordance of the manuscripts, an analysis of the palaeographic and linguistic criteria used in dating the manuscripts, a glossary of words occurring in the laws, identifying both law number and manuscript where each occurrence is found, indexes of Hittite, Sumerian and Akkadian words, of ancient texts cited, and of topics mentioned. Photographic plates of Old Hittite copies are also included.

Readership: Hittitologists, Assyriologists, historians of law, biblical scholars and all those interested in the culture and civilization of the Ancient Near East.

Continuity and Change

A journal of social structure, law and demography in past societies

Now in its second decade of publication, Continuity and Change defines a field of social history concerned with long-term continuities and discontinuities in the structures of past societies. Emphasising studies that draw on more than one of the traditional fields such as history, sociology, law, demography, economics or anthropology, the journal is committed to comparative studies over a broad range of cultures and time spans. It provides a balance between quantitative and qualitative data from the contributing disciplines, promoting greater dialogue and discussion among researchers and making their work accessible to a wider audience.

Subscription:

Continuity and Change is published three times a year in May, August and December. Volume 12, 1997 is £30 for Social History Society members; $44 for American Sociological Association members; £37/$56 for individuals; £65/$104 for institutions. ISSN 0268-4160.

Creating Born Criminals

NICOLE HAHN RAFTER

"Extremely polished, graceful, and persuasive. . . . Rafter smoothly synthesizes an extraordinarily large body of materials into a clear and easily read narrative." — Ellen Dwyer, author of Homes for the Mad: Life inside Two Nineteenth-Century Asylums

Genetic screening, new reproductive technologies, the promise of gene therapies, and the possibility of cloning have made biological solutions to human social problems seem plausible. Creating Born Criminals shows us how history can guide us in responding to the reemergence of eugenics.

In this first social history in sixty years of biological theories of crime, Nicole Hahn Rafter examines those theories' origins as well as their content and demonstrates their undue influence on crime control in the United States. Rafter reveals the astonishing reality of eugenic prisons, designed to hold "unfit" criminals for life, which existed as late as the 1960s and which sought to label some offenders not only as inferior but also as a threat to future generations.

Creating Born Criminals is also an exploration of the role of biological explanation as a form of discourse and of its impact upon society. While The Bell Curve and other recent books have stopped short of making eugenic recommendations, their contentions point toward eugenic conclusions, and people familiar with the history of eugenics can hear in them its echoes. Rafter demonstrates that we must recognize the dangers posed by the dominance of a theory that interprets social problems in biological terms and difference as biological inferiority.

EMPIRES/COLONIES/LEGAL CULTURES

A Joint Conference of The Australian and New Zealand Law and History Society and the Canadian Law and Society Association

3-5 July, 1998
Melbourne, Australia

Call For Papers

With the centenary of Australian federation rapidly approaching, Australians are reassessing their constitution and the significance of colonialism for the nation's future. Issues of republicanism, multiculturalism, gender equity and Aboriginal reconciliation are coming under scrutiny. These issues are not unique to Australia. The histories of imperial practices can be told throughout the world. Other former colonies are rethinking their imperialist legacies; some new colonialist cultures are being created.

In this context, the Australian and New Zealand Law and History Society is organising its eighteenth annual meeting as an international conference in collaboration with the Canadian Law and Society Association. The ANZLHS is an interdisciplinary group of scholars who share an interest in the connections to be made between history and law.

Offers of papers are now invited on the theme of imperialism, colonialism and the migration of legal cultures, or on other matters relevant to the primary concerns of the Society. Abstracts of approx. 100 words, with brief c.v., and specifying audio-visual needs etc., should be sent by December 31, 1997 to
