A new journal examining issues arising out of the interaction of politics, ideology, scholarship and teaching in high education. It explores questions pertaining to the maintenance of scholarly standards, the quality and evenhandedness of peer review, the preservation of intellectual tolerance and civility on campus and within academic associations, and the relationship between government and education. Published quarterly for the National Association of Scholars.

Early articles include:

James Tuttleton, Peter Shaw and Carol Iannone on ideology in literary criticism.

James Hitchcock, on Father Curran and Catholic University, and Max Hocutt on student evaluations.

Edwin Delattre, Robert Royal and Peter Suedfeld review the Barbara Foley case at Northwestern University.

Leslie Lenkowsky looks at alternative student journalism.

Published quarterly for the National Association of Scholars.
