

GHANA'S FOREIGN POLICY, 1957-1966

Diplomacy, Ideology, and the New State

W. SCOTT THOMPSON

This is a systematic and thorough analysis of a small, determined, and comparatively wealthy 'new' state's attempt to enlarge its influence and to augment its power. The inquiry covers Ghana's relations with the great powers, specifically its developing ties with Moscow and Peking, and, more theoretically, the limits of the influence of a small state on the actions of the great powers. Ghana's primary aim to unite Africa is considered: the utility of the methods used is revealed, and the results in policy, of irredentism combined with ideology, are explored as they relate to Ghana's tangled relations with her neighbors. Throughout the study the author considers the effects of the domestic forces set loose by Nkrumah's attempt to import a new ideology. $13.75

ONE-PARTY GOVERNMENT IN THE IVORY COAST

Revised Edition

ARISTIDE R. ZOLBERG

'Mr Zolberg's account of the rise of the Democratic Party of the Ivory Coast is well informed and brilliant; it ranks among the best two or three studies yet published on African political change.' African Forum

'Altogether this is an admirable work, carefully thought out and fully documented, which greatly adds to our understanding both of the Ivory Coast and of one-party systems.' International Affairs

In this revised edition, which includes a new Preface and a new Appendix, Professor Zolberg discusses his 'analytic second thoughts' in the light of his continued research and the literature on modernization which has appeared since 1964. He brings up to date the factual material about the Ivory Coast's social, economic, and political development since 1961-1962.

An Introduction to Sociology

J. E. GOLDTHORPE

A book particularly suited to the needs of students in African universities. Dr Goldthorpe taught sociology in Africa for many years and has first-hand knowledge of the difficulties faced by African undergraduates and social science students. In this book the author uses what the African student already knows to link sociology and social anthropology. He also introduces and explains concepts which are unfamiliar, for example the nature of social class in industrial societies.

The Analysis of Social Change

Based on Observations in Central Africa

GODFREY & MONICA WILSON

Monica and Godfrey Wilson wrote this book in 1944 as a result of field work in Tanzania, Malawi and Zambia, where they were able to observe the impact of European civilization upon traditional African societies and the structural changes that accompanied it. In spite of rapid political change in East and Central Africa since 1944, the work is of continuing importance as a pioneering study of social change.
'A challenging attempt to correlate the details of field observation with current sociological theory and to systematize the study of social change.' Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science

GENEVA-AFRICA

THE JOURNAL OF THE GENEVA-AFRICA INSTITUTE

Africa in time past lent the European imagination that touch of exotic adventure which its own milieu did not always provide. That time is no more. Africa today seeks her own way through difficulties and incertitudes to which no one open to her desire to meet on terms of equality can remain indifferent.

It is the wish of Geneva-Africa to be an active partner in this unconditional dialogue, and to contribute to a deeper comprehension of the problems and opportunities facing an emergent Africa.

Schism and Renewal in Africa

An Analysis of Six Thousand Contemporary Religious Movements

David B. Barrett

This study of the movements of renewal and independence which have been taking place within the Protestant and Catholic churches in thirty-four African nations (300 tribes) over the last hundred years examines the phenomenon in the light of a new type of cross-cultural methodology. The movements are shown to emerge spontaneously from a well-defined background of social and religious tension. 17 plates 10 text-figures 1 map 65/- net

The People's Republic

Obafemi Awolowo

History of East Africa

Volume I

Edited by Roland Oliver and Gervase Mathew

This is the first of three volumes in which the history of East Africa is studied from the African as well as from the European standpoint. The main interest to historians is now the African response to external challenges. The varied character of these responses was conditioned by the history of pre-colonial East Africa, by the ethnological distribution of its people, and by its geography. These, together with an account of European colonization, form the subject of this volume. 70/- net; paper covers 25/- net

The Oxford History of South Africa

Volume I: South Africa to 1870

Edited by Monica Wilson and Leonard Thompson

The Oxford History of South Africa has been planned and written in the belief that the central theme of South African history is interaction between peoples of diverse origins, languages, technologies, ideologies, and social systems. This volume, the first of two, starts—unlike previous works on the subject—with detailed surveys of what is known about the pre-colonial history of the African inhabitants. It goes on to describe the origins and expansion of the Afrikaners, the English settlements, the struggle for land, the rise of the kingdoms of Shaka and Moshweshwe, and the consequent interactions down to the discovery of diamonds in Griqualand West. 3 plates 7 maps 75/- net

Three Short Plays

The Swamp Dwellers

The Trials of Brother Jero

The Strong Breed

Wole Soyinka

These three short plays demonstrate Soyinka's ability as a dramatist. In The Trials of Brother Jero he highlights the comic elements of the situation, and in The Strong Breed and The Swamp Dwellers he concentrates on the personal and tragic conflicts of two different dramatic situations. All three plays reveal Soyinka's lyricism and sensitivity. Paper covers 7/6 net Three Crowns Books

After Mulungushi

The Economics of Zambian Humanism

edited by

Bastiaan de Gaay Fortman

On 19 April 1968 at Mulungushi, the birthplace of Zambia's Independence, President Kenneth Kaunda startled the world with his speech to the National Council of UNIP, the ruling party. It was the request in this speech to various leading companies to sell to the State controlling interests in their businesses that hit the headlines. But behind the speech was a deeply felt and carefully developed ideology which has become known as Zambian Humanism. The basis of this important book is a stimulating discussion by Zambians of the economic consequences of Zambian Humanism opening with President Kaunda's basic documents.

Political Development in Rural Tanzania

Goran Hyden

Today there is an increasing realization of the need for study of local, essentially rural, politics and the developmental process. Dr Hyden's analysis of the political culture of Tanzania is the first book firmly to relate national to local politics in an African country. He has focused first on the relationship between the rural inhabitants of Buhaya and the centre of the political system of which they are members, and second on the role of the Tanganyika African National Union (TANU) in the process of national development.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
