

ASSOCIATION

the leadership, as trustees of the association, are entrusted with the discretion to determine if and how the association may respond to events or trends. McClain adds that a contextual element of peer association responses also contributes to the decisions around if and how APSA may respond. Jordan-Zachery suggests utilizing APSA's existing policies on diversity and inclusion on formulating statements. Price expresses support for how APSA has placed an emphasis on diversity, equity, and inclusion, but she and Berinsky note that not all members may agree with the actions taken in support of that commitment. Htun expresses concern about the broad scope of the screening document. Sides notes that a perspective from the small group discussion was that if APSA is committed to diversity, equity, and inclusion and can bring political science scholarship to bear on those topics, then it is possible that APSA should more proactively release statements on those topics rather than waiting for an event to make the topic relevant. Bleich asks if a more proactive stance would make APSA appear politicized. Oren notes that political science and politics are intertwined. In response to a remark by Ansell, Paulson replies that statements and letters are one of many ways in which APSA can communicate principles and values within the association's broader public affairs strategy. Price notes that Council can make statements because of the position of the Council in leading the association, and Demessie notes that silence as well as action can be perceived as a political act. A motion is made to adopt the updated Advocacy Policy; Price seconds and the motion passes with twenty-one ayes, two nays, and two abstentions.

UPDATE ON ETHICS COMMITTEE REVISIONS TO THE ETHICS GUIDE

Mealy introduces an update on the Ethics Committee's revisions to the Ethics Guide. She reports that the Ethics Committee is working as a whole committee as well as in working groups to review and revise the Ethics Guide. She notes that the Ethics Committee hopes to have a draft for review by the APSA staff and APSA legal counsel by summer 2021. The expectation is to have a final draft submitted for review by Council during the fall 2021 Council Meeting. Mealy notes that the Ethics Committee is also identifying any gaps in the Ethics Guide, particularly guidelines for online and virtual conduct.

POLICY COMMITTEE UPDATES

Vande Bunte provides updates on the work of the Meetings and Conferences Policy Committee. She reports that the committee has focused on working with related groups to allow them to reach the 35-member threshold as well as providing guidance on the 2021 Annual Meeting.

Htun, chair of the Membership and Professional Development Policy Committee, provides updates on the work of the committee. She reports that the committee has focused on the member rebate policy and the member revocation policy.

Leal, chair of the Publications Policy Committee, provides updates on the work of the committee. He reports that the committee has focused on journal format, online access for journals, and open access.

Ansell, chair of the Public Engagement Policy Committee, provides updates on the work of the committee. He reports the committee has continued prior efforts to determine if APSA should issue guidelines for how to consider public engagement as part of the tenure and promotion process. He notes the committee is determining the role and purpose of a new standing committee. Paulson adds that the committee continues to discuss APSA's outreach strategy to members and the public.

C. Smith, member of the Teaching and Learning Policy Committee, provides updates on the work of the committee. He notes the committee is working on targeted videos about working and teaching at historically black colleges and universities. Additionally, the committee is working on maneuvering the Teaching and Learning Conference through the pandemic.

Box-Steffensmeier adjourns the meeting. ■
