Shifts in Public Relations

By N. S. B. GRAS

1. What are public relations?	97
2. Rise of an interest in public relations	100
3. Business is business: a fundamental dictum	102
4. Let business alone, relatively speaking	104
5. The first period in the history of public relations: the public must help business	106
6. The second period in the history of public relations: let the public keep its hands off business and let business men freely compete	111
7. The third period in the history of public relations: economic freedom is dangerous; regulation and control are the only enduring systems	118
8. The public be pleased (but fooled)	120
9. The public be fully served and fully informed (and perhaps partly educated)	122
10. Public relations counsellors	127
11. Public relations departments	129
12. Effect of business changes, especially depressions, on public relations	134
13. Other business factors in the creation of bad public relations	136
14. Success, failure, and difficulties in public relations	139
