

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

ERHARD BLANKENBURG is Professor of Sociology of Law at the Free University of Amsterdam. He has published a number of books on the police, state prosecutors, civil courts, labor courts and access to justice, all of which have been based upon empirical studies conducted in Germany. He is an editor of the Zeitschrift für Rechtssoziologie and the Jahrbuch für Rechtssoziologie und Rechtstheorie. Among his English language publications is a reader on Innovations in the Legal Services, which he edited in 1980.

DALE DANNEFER is Assistant Professor of Education and Sociology, University of Rochester. His current research interests include the determinants and consequences of placement of juvenile offenders in pretrial detention, and he is also studying adult career patterns and psychological theories of human development.

SHELDON EKLAND-OLSON is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Texas, Austin. He is currently working on a study of prison violence as well as a study of the post-Furman death sentencing process in Texas.

JOHN LIEB received his law degree from the University of Texas Law School. He is currently practicing law in Atlanta, Georgia.

JOHN T. SCHOLZ is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. His recent work on regulation includes a survey of state regulatory reforms, an analysis of regulatory policies to improve corporate competence, and a study of state-level OSHA enforcement activities.

JAN TEN KATE is a lawyer and currently is Researcher at Erasmus University, Rotterdam, the Netherlands. His current research focuses on determinants of private law decision-making.

GUNTHER TEUBNER is Professor of Private Law and Sociology of Law at the University of Bremen, Germany. He is currently teaching at the European University Institute at Florence, Italy. He received his Habilitation in 1977 at the University of Tübingen, Germany, and has published books on the theory of general clauses in contract law and on organizational democracy in private organizations. His current research is concerned with co-determination and the public responsibility of economic organizations and with theories of law in the welfare state.

PETER J. VAN KOPPEN is a psychologist at the Faculty of Law of Erasmus University, Rotterdam, the Netherlands. His current research focuses on determinants of private law decision-making.

LOUIS A. ZURCHER is Ashbel Smith Professor of Social Work and Sociology at the University of Texas, Austin. Currently editor of The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science, he has published numerous books and articles on social problems topics including poverty, natural disaster, the parole system, pornography, bureaucracy, divorce, and the family. His most recent books (1983) are Social Roles: Conformity, Conflict, and Creativity and (with Ruth G. McRoy) Transracial and Inracial Adoptees: The Adolescent.