

After teaching two and a half years at Hunter College, Robert Fried was appointed assistant professor of government at Bard College. He began his new duties in February.

Robert Giles (Chicago, Ph.D. '52) last on the staff of South Texas College, was appointed lecturer in the school of government and public administration and lecturer in the department of history, College of Arts and Sciences, of American University in the fall semester, 1960.

Stewart L. Grow, formerly chairman of the department of political science, Brigham Young University, has been appointed director of the institute of government service. He is now on leave from teaching duties to work on the organization and curriculum for the new institute. Mark Cannon, formerly assistant to Congressman H. A. Dixon of Utah, has been appointed chairman of the political science department.

William J. Keefe of Chatham College has been promoted to professor of political science.

Earl O. Kline who recently received his Ph.D. from Princeton University, has been promoted to associate professor of political science at The Citadel.

Martin Lichterman has resigned from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in order to take up new duties on February 1 as executive secretary of the New England Board of Higher Education in Winchester, Massachusetts. Dr. Lichterman had been on leave of absence from M.I.T. since February, 1959, in order to serve as research director in the office of the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Gerard J. Mangone has been appointed executive officer of the new Maxwell Center for the Study of Overseas Operations at Syracuse University. He recently completed a trip to Nigeria, India, Pakistan, Hong Kong, and Japan where the Maxwell School either has or contemplates overseas programs.

Harry A. Marlow has been appointed assistant professor at the graduate school of public and international affairs.

Alfred G. Meyer was promoted to professor of political science at Michigan State University last summer. He was one of two American professors participating at the centennial celebration of the A. I. Cuza University in IASI, Rumania in October-November.

Daniel P. Moynihan, formerly director of the New York State Government Research Project at Syracuse University has been appointed assistant professor of political science at the Maxwell School.

Lowell G. Noonan has resigned as associate professor of political science at the University of Southern California to become associate professor of political science at San Fernando Valley State College in Northridge, California.

Joseph L. Nyomarkay, formerly of the University of Minnesota, has been appointed an instructor in the department of political science at the University of Southern California.

Arthur L. Peterson has joined the faculty at Ohio Wesleyan University as director of the Arneson Institute of Practical Politics and lecturer in political science. Mr. Peterson was most recently attached to the Republican National Committee as a fellow under the Citizenship Clearing House Program.

Claude S. Phillips, Jr., associate professor of political science, has been named director of the newly created institute of regional studies at Western Michigan University. The institute has been set up to improve teaching and offerings on the Non-Western World under a Carnegie grant.

Sam Pearce Pinkerton has been appointed professor of political and social science in the military, United States and world affairs department of the U. S. Army Information School.

Joseph Pois, financial vice president and director of the Signode Steel Strapping Company has been named professor of public administration and director of the public administration program of the graduate school of public and international affairs at the University of Pittsburgh.

Wendell G. Schaeffer, associate professor of public affairs has been named assistant dean of the graduate school of public and international affairs, University of Pittsburgh.

Malcolm Smith, who has been a consultant for the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, has been appointed professor of government and acting assistant director of the governmental research bureau at the State University of South Dakota.

Helen Shirley Thomas has been promoted to assistant professor in political science at Goucher College.

Eric Voegelin of the Institut Für Politische Wissenschaften, University of Munich, has also accepted appointment to the permanent faculty of the University of Notre Dame.

Warren Weston, formerly at New Mexico Highlands University has been appointed assistant professor of political science at the University of Denver.

IN MEMORIAM

Luther J. Lee, Jr., former dean of the Claremont Graduate School and for fifteen years a valued member of the department of government at Pomona College, died March 31 at his home in Claremont after a year's illness with lateral sclerosis. He was 49.

Dean Lee won his baccalaureate at Pomona College, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and subsequently earned both an M.A. and a Ph.D. at the University of California in Berkeley. His doctoral dissertation, devoted to an analysis of the development of federalism, reflected both of his main fields of interest as a teacher, namely American government and political theory.

In the year following his appointment to the Pomona faculty in 1941, his senior colleague, Edward McChesney Sait, died and it fell to Dr. Lee to guide the department through the period of the war. Blessed with administrative talent as well as being a competent classroom teacher, he served during the year 1949-50 as assistant field director for the Committee for Economic Development and from 1950 to 1960 as Director of the Claremont Summer Session. Success in these assignments led to his appointment in 1953 as Dean of the Claremont Graduate School, which post he held until his resignation last July because of illness. He was a co-author, with several colleagues at Pomona, of the volume Our Needy Aged: A California Study of a National Problem (Henry Holt, 1954)—JOHN A. VIEG.