In April 1977, the Board of Directors of the African Studies Association resolved that the Association should, from time to time, publish papers on significant aspects of African Studies. The Board decided that the first publication should be a series of essays on the responsibilities of the foreign scholar in Africa, and suggested a number of scholars who might contribute to the publication. I regret that we have had considerable difficulty in obtaining an African point of view, but I believe the interview recorded by Peter Gutkind is a fair representation of African concerns.
