

Activities

Marijke Breuning and John T. Ishiyama, both associate professors of political science at Truman State University, will share the book review editor responsibilities for International Politics.

Alan B. Cohen, professor of health policy and management, and director, Health Care Management Program, School of Management, Boston University, was elected to the National Academy of Social Insurance. He was cited for his contributions to the nation's understanding of social insurance programs.

Gary Copeland, associate professor, University of Oklahoma, assumed the directorship of The Carl Albert Center for Congressional Research and Studies, served as president of the Southwestern Political Science Association, and acted as president of the Norman Public Schools Board of Education in 2000.

Susanne Jonas, University of California, Santa Cruz, authored Of Centaurs and Doves: Guatemala's Peace Process (Westview, 2000). The Spanish translation of the book was published by FLACSO/Guatemala.

Jonathan Riley, department of political science and Murphy Institute of Political Economy, Tulane University, is a Laurance S. Rockefeller Visiting Fellow at the University Center for Human Values, Princeton University, 2000-01.

Robert P. Watson, associate professor of political science, University of Hawaii, Hilo, founded and will serve as editor of the new journal White House Studies, a quarterly journal that will begin publication in spring 2001.

Ernest J. Wilson III, director, Center for International Development and Conflict Management, University of Maryland, College Park, was named to the board of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Administrative Appointments

David Adamany, president, Temple University.

J. Theodore Anagnoson, chair, department of political science, California State University, Los Angeles.

Leslie R. Alm, chair, department of political science, Boise State University.

Sandra Ardrey, chair, department of government, Western Kentucky University.

Anne N. Costain, associate vice president for human relations and risk management, University of Colorado, Boulder.

John J. DiIulio Jr., director, Center for Research on Religion and Urban Civil Society, University of Pennsylvania.

J.D. Droody, provost, Vermilion College (MN).

Jane McBride Gates, interim associate dean, College of Arts and Sciences, Arkansas State University.

Arthur B. Gunlicks, chair, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Mike Lofchie, chair, department of political science, University of California, Los Angeles.

Jack Nagel, chair, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Charles Noble, chair, department of political science, California State University, Long Beach.

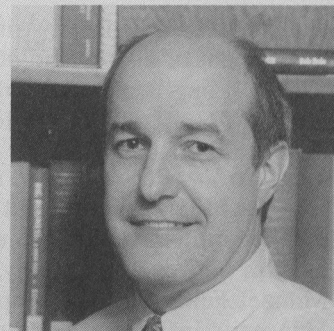

Glen Sussman, chair, department of political science and geography, Old Dominion University.

FOR THE RECORD

Ronald M. Peters, Regents' Professor of Political Science and chair of the political science department at the University of Oklahoma, has retired from the directorship and curatorship of The Carl Albert Center for Congressional Research and Studies, posts he has held since the center's establishment in 1979. The center was established by the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education and the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma as a tribute to the ideals and accomplishments of the Honorable Carl Albert, an Oklahoma graduate and the 46th Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Peters is the author of articles on constitutional government and democratic theory and The Massachusetts Constitution of 1780: A Social Compact (The University of Massachusetts Press, 1978), which examines the political theory of the American Revolution. He has also published The American Speakership: The Office in Historical Perspective (Johns Hopkins Press, 1990), which is based, in part, on a year spent in Washington working in the Speaker's office and on research materials housed at the Carl Albert Center.

Peters joined the Oklahoma faculty in 1975, after received his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from Indiana University. His major teaching interests are in political theory and American government. The University of Oklahoma has recognized him with its Amoco Good Teaching Award and the Regents Award for Distinguished Teaching.

Ronald M. Peters

Kathryn Dunn Tenpas, associate director, Washington Semester Program, University of Pennsylvania.

Richard P. Wang, interim chair, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

Jeff Worsham, director of graduate studies, department of political science, West Virginia University.

New Appointments

Bianca Adair, assistant professor, department of government, Western Kentucky University.

Brady Baybeck, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Meena Bose, assistant professor, department of social sciences, United States Military Academy; formerly, Hofstra University.

Stephen G. Brooks, instructor, department of government, Dartmouth College.

Melissa Buis, assistant professor, department of politics, Willamette University.

Thomas M. Carsey, associate professor, department of political science, Florida State University.

Kathleen A. Collins, instructor, department of government, Dartmouth College.

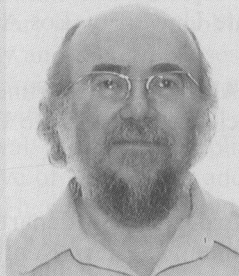

Susan Collins, assistant professor of political science, University of Houston; formerly, The Liberty Fund.

Avis Jones-DeWeever, assistant professor of political science, University of Richmond.

Donald Kent Douglas, instructor, department of history and political science, Long Beach City College; formerly, University of California, Santa Barbara.

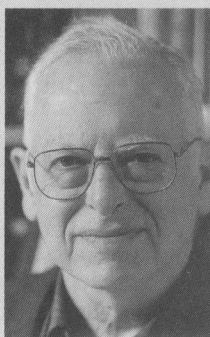

Carolyn M. Dudek, assistant professor, department of political science, Hofstra University; formerly, Jean Monnet Fellow at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy.

Sharon Wright, University of Missouri, Columbia, has been promoted to associate professor of political science and black studies. During academic year 2000-01 she will be a visiting scholar at the University of Michigan. She teaches courses in African-American, urban, and American politics. Wright earned her Ph.D. in 1993 from the University of Tennessee.

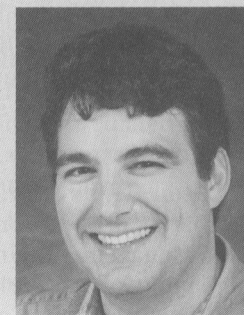

Bertell Ollman, professor of politics at New York University was a visiting professor at Oxford University for the spring semester of 2000. During the semester he delivered the annual course of lectures on Marxism. Ollman's major research interests include Marxism, dialectical method, and history of political thought. He was awarded his Ph.D by Oxford in 1967.

Anne Permaloff, professor of political science at Auburn University, Montgomery, has been named Auburn University Montgomery Alumni Professor. The Alumni Professorship recognizes a faculty member's excellence in teaching, research, and writing, and carries a three-year term and an annual stipend. Permaloff has been on the faculty at AUM since 1975, and she has published several books and numerous journal articles on Alabama politics, teaching, and public policy. She earned her Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota.

Fred I. Greenstein, professor of politics and chair of the Program in Leadership Studies at Princeton University, was recently honored with the Harold D. Lasswell Career Award by the International Society for Political Psychology. The Lasswell award recognizes a scholar who has addressed unexplored areas and whose work changed the ways in which these ideas were understood. Greenstein joined the Princeton faculty in 1973.

Andrew Sabl has joined the department of policy studies, University of California, Los Angeles. He earned his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1997. He was most recently a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in the Program on Constitutional Government at Harvard.

Christopher Foreman Jr. has joined the School of Public Affairs at the University of Maryland, College Park as a professor of public policy. Most recently, Foreman has been a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution. His publications include The African American Predicament (1999) and The Promise and Peril of Environmental Justice (1998). He earned his Ph.D. in 1980.

Clarke Cochran, professor of political science at Texas Tech University, will hold the William H. Shannon Chair in Catholic Studies at Nazareth College (NY) during the spring semester of 2001. A deacon in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Lubbock, Texas, Cochran specializes in teaching interdisciplinary courses in religion and politics and public health care policy. He will teach two courses during his time at Nazareth. Cochran earned his Ph.D. from Duke University.

Paula D. McClain, has joined the political science faculty at Duke University, leaving the University of Virginia after nine years. She is the author of five books, including Can We All Get Along? Racial and Ethnic Minorities in American Politics (with Joseph Stewart Jr.). McClain is currently a vice president of the International Political Science Association. She earned her Ph.D. from Howard University in 1977.

Harry N. Hirsch, has been appointed to the Theodore Mitau Chair of Public Law and American Politics at Macalester College. Hirsch, a leading scholar in public law, is author of A Theory of Liberty: The Constitution of Minorities and The Enigma of Felix Frankfurter. Hirsch joins the faculty at Macalester after serving for many years at the University of California, San Diego, where he was most recently department chair. He earned his Ph.D. from Princeton University.

Byron Shafer, formerly of Oxford University, has joined the department of political science at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. A scholar of American politics, Shafer held the Andrew W. Mellon Chair as professor of American government at Nuffield College, Oxford for several years. He earned his Ph.D. from the University of California at Berkeley in 1979.

Margaret Ellis, department of government, Western Kentucky University.

Richard N. Engstrom, assistant professor of political science, University of Wyoming.

Margaret Farrar, assistant professor, department of political science, Augustana College (IL).

David M. Green, assistant professor, department of political science, Hofstra University; formerly, Iowa State University.

Larry Grossback, assistant professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

David Jeffrey, assistant professor, department of political science, Tulane University.

Jerome Maddox, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Bryan W. Marshall, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Lanny W. Martin, assistant professor, department of political science, Florida State University.

Michael McDonald, assistant professor of political studies and research fellow in the Illinois Legislative Studies Center, University of Illinois, Springfield; formerly, Vanderbilt University.

Anthony McGann, assistant professor, department of political science, University of California, Irvine; formerly, Duke University.

Michael Morrell, assistant professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University; formerly, Arizona State University.

Rebecca Morton, professor of political science, University of Houston; formerly, University of Iowa.

Andrew Norris, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Salvatore Pitruzzello, assistant professor, department of political science, Tulane University.

Keith Poole, Kenneth Lay Professor of Political Science, University of Houston; formerly, Carnegie Mellon University.

John M. Salazar, diplomat in residence, department of political science, Tulane University.

Allan C. Stam III, associate professor, department of government, Dartmouth College.

Mary Ann Tetreault, Una Chapman Cox Distinguished Professor of International Affairs, department of political science, Trinity University (TX).

Gizachew Tiruneh, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Robert Vitalis, assistant professor, department of political science, and director, Middle East Center, University of Pennsylvania.

William C. Wohlforth, associate professor, department of government, Dartmouth College.

Promotions

Christopher Bailey, professor, American studies department, University of Keele.

John R. Baker, professor, department of political science, Wittenberg University.

Ann O.M. Bowman, James F. and Maude B. Byrnes Chair of Government, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Mary Clark, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Tulane University.

Dewey M. Clayton, associate professor, department of political science, University of Louisville.

John S. Duffield, associate professor with tenure, University of Georgia.

Siegrun F. Freyss, associate professor with tenure, California State University, Los Angeles.

Matthew J. Gabel, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Kentucky.

James C. Garand, Emogene Pliner Distinguished Professor in Political Science, Louisiana State University.

Larry George, professor, department of political science, California State University, Long Beach.

Avery Goldstein, professor of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Jean-Germain Gros, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

John Fuh-sheng Hsieh, professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Rathnam Indurthy, professor, department of political science, McNeese State University.

Ronald F. King, professor, department of political science, Tulane University.

Jason F. Kirksey, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Oklahoma State University.

George A. Krause, associate professor with tenure, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Stephen K. Ma, professor, department of political science, California State University, Los Angeles.

Joyce M. Mushaben, professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

T.V. Paul, professor of political science, McGill University.

Gerry Riposa, professor, department of political science, California State University, Long Beach.

Sandra K. Schneider, professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Rudy Sil, Janice and Julian Bers Term Chair, School of Arts and Sciences, University of Pennsylvania.

Lana Stein, professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Ronald K. Vogel, professor, department of political science, University of Louisville.

Rodger D. Yeager, Emeritus Professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Fang Zhu, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Oklahoma State University.

Retirements

Fredrick Frey, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Dennis R. Judd, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Sugwon Kang, department of political science, Hartwick College.

William J. Keefe, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Carol W. Kohfeld, department of political science and public policy administration, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Chong-Sik Lee, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

John O. Lindell, department of political science, Hartwick College.

John Parker, department of government, Western Kentucky University.

Mary Susan Power, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

Benjamin W. Smith, professor, department of political science, California State University, Los Angeles.

Donald Smith, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

J. Fred Springer, department of political science and public policy administration, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Dean L. Yarwood, department of political science, University of Missouri, Columbia.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Calvin Chen, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Guy DeWeever, postdoctoral scholar, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Robert Di Prizio, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Paula L'Ecuyer, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Michael Lipson, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

Joao Resende-Santos, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

John Francis Ryan, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Tammy Sarver, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

A. Maurits van der Veen, postdoctoral fellow, Christopher H. Browne Center for International Politics, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania.

James Woods, adjunct professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Neal Woods, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Awards

Woodrow Wilson Center Names Fellows for 2000-01

Ten APSA members were among the 21 scholars awarded fellowships from the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars for the 2000-01 academic year. Their names and projects are:

Javier Corrales, assistant professor of political science, Amherst College: "The Politics of Education Reform in Latin America."

William T. Gormley Jr., professor of government and public policy, Georgetown University: "International Bargaining after Devolution."

Margaret E. Keck, professor of political science, Johns Hopkins University: "Networking in the State: The Micropolitics of Water Reform in Sao Paulo."

Peter M. Lewis, associate professor, American University: "Growing Apart: Governance and Economic Change in Indonesia and Nigeria."

James W. McGuire, associate professor of government, Wesleyan University: "Social Policy and Human Development in East Asia and Latin America."

Jill Norgren, professor of government and legal studies, John Jay College-CUNY: "Before It Was Merely Difficult: Belva Lockwood's Life in Law and Politics."

Richard E. Stren, professor of political science, University of Toronto: "The New Local Governance of Development: An Urban Paerspective."

Ganga Bahadur Thappa, professor of political science, Tribhuvan University (Nepal): "Nepal: Democracy in Transition."

L. William Zartman, professor and director of African studies, Johns Hopkins University: "Cowardly Lions: Preventing State Collapse."

J. Nicholas Ziegler, visiting associate professor of political science, University of California, Berkeley: "Liberal Ideas, Organized Interests, and Institutional Reform: Unified Germany in a Changing World Economy."

Policy Studies Organization Recognizes APSA Members

During its annual awards luncheon, the Policy Studies Organization recognized the achievements and contributions of several APSA members.

William Browne, professor, department of political science, Central Michigan University, was given the Robert Lane Award for outstanding service as a PSO president.

Rodolfo de la Garza, Mike Hogg Professor of Community Affairs, department of government, University of Texas, Austin, shared the Theodore Lowi Award for the best article in the Policy Studies Journal.

Peter deLeon, University of Colorado, Denver, received the Harold D. Lasswell Award for outstanding scholarship contributing to the understanding of the substance or process of public policy.

A. Lee Fritschler, assistant secretary for post-secondary education, U.S.

Department of Education, and president emeritus, Dickinson College, was named winner of the Hubert H. Humphrey Award, given each year to an outstanding public policy practitioner.

Christopher Z. Mooney, director, Illinois Legislative Studies Center, University of Illinois, Springfield, received the Don Hadwiger Award for editing the best symposium in Policy Studies Journal in 1999. The symposium was titled "The Politics of Morality Policy."

Marion Orr, associate professor, Brown University, received the Aaron Wildavsky Award for the best policy studies book published in 1999: Black Social Capital: The Politics of School Reform in Baltimore.

Mark Setzler, Ph.D. candidate, department of government, University of Texas, Austin, shared the Theodore Lowi Award for the best article in the Policy Studies Journal.

Also receiving PSO's Thomas Dye Award, given to individuals who have edited two or more PSO books or journal symposia, were: William Browne, Central Michigan University; David Cingranelli, SUNY-Binghamton; William Crotty, Northeastern University; George Edwards, Texas A&M University; Samuel Grove, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign; Matthew Holden Jr., University of Virginia; Richard Hula, Michigan State University; Helen Ingram, University of Arizona; Donald Jackson, Texas Christian University; Rita Mae Kelly, Arizona State University; Fred Lazin, Ben Gurion University; Dean Mann, University of California, Santa Barbara; Fred Meyer, Ball State University; Harrell Rodgers, University of Houston; Alan Stone, University of Houston.

Kettering Foundation Names Fellowship Winner

The Kettering Foundation awarded a one-year ABD fellowship to Maurice Meilleur. Meilleur is currently pursuing a Ph.D. from the department of political science at Indiana University where he has served as an associate instructor. His dissertation is titled "A Community of Inquiry? John Dewey and the Science of Democracy." It is a study of the causes and consequences of the gap between American politics and American political scientists, and examines ways that the gap might be overcome through changes in professional practice. He holds a master's degree from Washington State University.

Other Awards

Stephen Bach, doctoral candidate, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, received the university's Outstanding TA Award for Social Sciences.

Herman L. Boschken, professor of organization and management, San Jose State University, has been named a Fulbright Distinguished European Chair. He will spend the 2000-01 academic year at the University of New Brunswick.

Dovile Budryte, assistant professor of international studies, Brenau University (GA), was named a History and the Politics of Reconciliation Fellow by the Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs. She will study interethnic reconciliation in Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia during the post-Soviet period.

David E. England, department of political science, Arkansas State University, received the university's annual Faculty Teaching award in April 2000

Joel N. Glassman, associate professor, department of political science, and director, Center for International Studies, University of Missouri, St. Louis, received the 1999 Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Service.

Celine Jacquemin, doctoral candidate, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, received the TA Fellowship Award for UCI.

Seymour Martin Lipset, Hazel Professor of Public Policy, George Mason University, received the Career of Distinguished Scholarship Award from the American Sociological Association at the ASA's 2000 annual meeting.

Ian Lustick, professor of political science, was awarded the Merriam Term Chair by the School of Arts and Sciences, University of Pennsylvania.

Anthony W. Marx, associate professor of political science, Columbia University, has been awarded the 2000 Barrington Moore Prize of the American Sociological Association for his book, Making Race and Nation: A Comparison of the United States, South Africa and Brazil, (Cambridge University Press, 1998). The award recognizes "the best book published in comparative-historical sociology in the last three years."

Matthew C. Moen, professor, department of political science, University of Maine, was named the University of Maine Trustee Professor for 2000-01. The professorship honors and supports contributions to academic excellence. Moen will spend the year studying the impact of state legislative term limits.

Richard Pacelle Jr., associate professor of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis, has received the 2000 Governor's Award for Excellence in Teaching and the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching.

Frances Fox Piven, Distinguished Professor, Graduate Center-CUNY, received the Distinguished Career Award for the Practice of Sociology from the American Sociological Association at the ASA's 2000 annual meeting.

Rosemary O'Leary, Syracuse University, Bob Durant, University of Baltimore, Dan Fiorino, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and Paul

Weiland, Harvard University, won two awards for their jointly authored book, Managing for the Environment (Jossey-Bass, 1999): Best Book in Public and Nonprofit Management for 2000, awarded by the Academy of Management, and Best Book in Environmental Policy and Environmental Management for 1999, awarded by the American Society for Public Administration.

Wayne Sandholtz, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, received the Teaching Excellence Award from the UCI School of Social Sciences.

Phillippa Strum received an honorable mention for the American Bar Association's Silver Gavel Award for her book, When the Nazis Came to Skokie: Freedom for the Speech We Hate. The award is given in recognition of outstanding efforts to foster public understanding of the law.

Charles Tilly, Joseph L. Bottenwieser Professor of Social Sciences, Columbia University, received the Distinguished Scholarly Publication Award from the American Sociological Association for Durable Inequality.

Renee Van Vechten, doctoral candidate, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, received the Teaching Excellence for Social Sciences award from UCI.

Howard J. Wiarda, Leonard J. Horwitz Professor of Latin, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, has received a Fulbright award to study in Austria and Hungary.

KUDOS

Samuel H. Beer, Eaton Professor of the Science of Government Emeritus at Harvard University and a former president of APSA, was this year elected a corresponding fellow of the British Academy. He was also chosen as the inaugural winner of the Political Studies Association of the United Kingdom's Isaiah Berlin Award. Established in 1902, the British Academy is the national academy for the humanities and the social sciences in England. Each year, it honors a number of scholars for their contributions to the sciences. Corresponding Fellows of the Academy come from outside England. In 2000, 14 scholars from six countries were named Corresponding Fellows.

Samuel Beer (R) receives The Berlin Award from committee chair Professor Lord Smith of Clifton.

As part its 50th anniversary celebration and the new millennium, the Political Studies Association of the United Kingdom offered a number of awards at its 2000 meeting recognizing extraordinary contributions. Amongst these was the Life Long Achievement Award, named for Sir Isaiah Berlin. In recognizing Beer with this prize, the committee noted his long career and stature as America's foremost scholar of British politics. Beer's major publications include the seminal work, Modern British Politics (1965), which received APSA's Woodrow Wilson Prize. He is also the author of Britain Against Itself (1983), and, in 1993, produced a well-received study of America's Founding Fathers titled To Make a Nation: The Rediscovery of American Federalism.

His most recent research, carried out in part during a stint as a senior scholar at the Woodrow Wilson Center, concerns developing a public philosophy capable of guiding decisionmakers facing the challenges of the new century.

Educated at the University of Michigan, Oxford, and Harvard, where he received the Ph.D. in 1943, he taught in Harvard's department of government until his retirement in 1981. Upon retiring, Beer was the first occupant of the Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. Chair in American Politics at Boston College. He has honorary degrees from Drake, DePauw, and Sussex Universities and is a member of the Royal Historical Society. Beer served as president of the American Political Science Association in 1977 and has the distinction of being the first foreigner to become vice president of the Political Studies Association of the UK.

The American Political Science Association

Ralph Bunche Summer Institute Hosted by Duke University

Named after the 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner, the Ralph Bunche Summer Institute invites applications from African-American, Latino(a), and Native American students between their junior and senior years of college to attend the five week Summer Institute in June and early July 2001. Designed to introduce 15 to 20 students to the world of graduate study and encourage application to Ph.D. programs in political science, the Institute includes two transferable credit courses, one in quantitative analysis and the other on race and American politics. In addition, guest lecturers and recruiters from Ph.D. programs visit with students, and the Kaplan Educational Center assists in preparation for taking the Graduate Record Examination. The deadline for receipt of applications is February 1, 2001. Applicants must be U.S. citizens at the time of applying.

Classes are held on the Duke University campus where students have access to a fully equipped computer laboratory, library collections and other university facilities. Additionally, transportation to and from the Institute, meals, housing and course credit are provided by the Duke University with a major grant from the National Science Foundation and additional support from APSA and Duke University.

Students who have participated in this program over the past ten years have reported improvement in their analytical, writing, and quantitative skills. The academic environment is challenging, yet supportive. Students learn what is necessary to be successful in a graduate program and as a scholar.

Most students who attend the Ralph Bunche Summer Institute excel in their senior year and go on to graduate school, many with full graduate fellowships and teaching assistantships. A number of Institute participants have gone on to receive their Masters or Ph.D. degrees, and three have already been named assistant professors at the university level.

For more information or additional application materials, please contact:

American Political Science Association
Ralph Bunche Summer Institute
1527 New Hampshire Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20036-1206
(202) 483-2512
or e-mail:
minority@apsanet.org