

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

JILL K. ANDERSON received her law degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison and has worked with the Milwaukee Dispute Mapping Project.

SARAH FENSTERMAKER BERK is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. She holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from Northwestern University. She has published in a number of social science journals, and edited the recently published fifth volume of the Sage Yearbooks in Women's Policy Studies, Women and Household Labor.

J. JOSEPH BURNS is Assistant Professor of Sociology at Princeton University, where he teaches courses in the sociology of law and large-scale organizations. He received his Ph.D. from Yale in 1977. His current research focuses on the effects of different parameters of the litigation process on the frequency of out-of-court settlements.

ROBERT M. HAYDEN is a lawyer and anthropologist who has done field work with the Iroquois and in India. He is presently completing a doctoral dissertation on the procedures of an Indian caste council for the Department of Anthropology at SUNY-Buffalo and preparing to undertake a study of self-management courts in Yugoslavia.

PAULINE HOULDEN is Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle. She received a Ph.D. in social psychology from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. A major focus of her research has been issues in procedural justice.

CANDACE KRUTTSCHNITT is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Minnesota. She received her Ph.D. in sociology from Yale University in 1979. Her research interests focus on female offenders, and she is currently analyzing comparative data on male and female felons processed through the Minneapolis District Court Probation Department.

DONILEEN LOSEKE is a Ph.D. candidate in sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Her past work has appeared in Social Science Research and The Sociology of Work and Occupations. Her current research is concerned with violence against women, with particular attention to social structural responses to battered women.

LAWRENCE ROSEN, Professor of Anthropology at Princeton University and Adjunct Professor of Law at Columbia Law School, received his Ph.D. and J.D. from the University of Chicago. He is the co-author of Meaning and Order in Moroccan Society and editor of The American Indian and the Law. His current interests center on the role of language in the creation of social ties and the development of modern Islamic law.

STEPHEN L. WASBY is Professor of Political Science at the State University of New York at Albany. He has authored several books about the impact and communication of Supreme Court decisions, and has edited books about policy impact. His current interests include federal appellate courts and judicial administration. He is a member of the editorial board of Justice System Journal and Treasurer of the Law and Society Association.