Private treatment of anorexia nervosa

A specialist unit for the treatment of anorexia nervosa has been established at Bowden House Clinic. It is led by a consultant psychiatrist with a special interest and experience in the management of the condition, supported by a team of nurses and therapists trained in the care of anorexic patients.

Referring psychiatrists and physicians are given full facilities to work closely with the team so that they may themselves provide continuing care after in-patient treatment.

Bowden House Clinic – a member of the St. Andrew's Hospital Group of private psychiatric hospitals – is only 30 minutes by road from central London. Subscribers to private medical insurance schemes may be able to claim within the terms of their cover for treatment at the clinic.

What do you look for in a patient support system?

Obviously, your relationship with your patients and the treatment programmes you determine for them are of paramount importance.

But a key element in any treatment programme is a complete and effective system that implements your decisions regarding patient care.

A system tailored within broad parameters to meet individual patient needs, covering a wide range of psychiatric disorders as well as drug addiction and alcoholism.

And it should be carried out by experienced staff – resident medical officers, trained psychiatric nurses, therapists and counsellors – who can design and implement a treatment programme in your absence or complement your own.

In other words, a support system like ours, based on years of international experience within a caring and supportive environment.

Because after all, a good patient care system is one that helps you help your patients recover.
