RELIGIOUS SISTERS

The English translation of 'Directoire des Superieures' and 'Les Adaptations de la Vie Religieuse', written by distinguished members of the French clergy, secular and regular, and consisting of seventeen essays falling under five main headings—'The Theology of Religious Life', 'The Idea of a Superior', 'Vocation and Formation of Subjects', and 'Adaptations in Modern Religious Life'. An English doctor contributes an essay on psychology. Superiors particularly, but nuns also, will find much food for fruitful thought in this book; teaching nuns especially will learn much about the exercise of authority over children; priests will find these essays helpful, too, especially if they are confessors or spiritual directors to nuns; and lastly, young women considering the religious life will find an expression of high ideals and a guide to what to look for in their choice.

Guidance of Religious

By the Rev.

I. WATTEROTT, O.M.I.

Translated by Rev. A. Simon, O.M.I.

This volume is unusual, perhaps unique, because it is addressed, not to religious in general but to religious superiors. The author, who was himself such a superior and who had experience in preaching retreats to religious superiors, has a sympathetic understanding of their problems and needs. His judgment is wise, his counsel prudent, his exhortations inspiring.

VOCATIONS

The Congregation of Our Lady of Mercy

founded over a hundred years ago for the Christian education of youth, and having houses in various parts of the world, is in need of vocations to carry on its meritorious work.

The congregation is composed of both priests and brothers, and candidates are prepared for either calling.

Young men and boys who feel called to serve God in this Congregation should apply for further particulars to:
