

Literary Gazette, the Soviet weekly, that the KGB supports "in every way and will continue to support the fruitful creative efforts of writers, film-makers, workers in the mass information and propaganda media, artists, composers, actors, the whole creative intelligentsia, which are aimed at producing works of high ideological and artistic content about Chekists (secret police) and Border Guards, in keeping with our times."

What is IPSA doing meeting in a place like this where a secret police has the right and the power to tell artists what they must do?

Georgi Arbatov, the Soviet expert on the United States and Canada, wanders around this continent, moving in the highest intellectual and political circles, loftily discussing the anti-hegemonist Chinese and the warmongers like Sen. Henry Jackson.

What would happen if a dinner guest at a faculty club dinner—Arbatov loves academic dinners—were to ask him about the thousands of dissidents who are locked away in jails and lunatic asylums? What would his answer be?

Two years ago he was asked about the mistreatment of an imprisoned Soviet dissident. He lost his temper and snapped back: "Do you know what would have happened to him when Stalin was alive?"

I knew he meant for us to be grateful for this amelioration in Soviet humanism. Who knows —in another 60 years, perhaps no psychiatric prison hospitals; perhaps Rostropovich's sister will be allowed out.

The IPSA leaders who decided that Moscow is the place to meet this summer like to argue that it is important to keep in touch because it helps decent social scientists in Russia in some magical way, that it's better to get to know one another, that we all know the USSR is a dictatorship but perhaps by cultural contacts we can help soften them up a bit and so on.

But the same arguments could be made for holding an IPSA conference in South Africa or in Chile or Nicaragua or Rhodesia. South Africa has its apartheid and Russia its anti-Semitism. South Africa bans people and, as Mihailo Mihailov, the Yugoslav dissident, pointed out, so does Yugoslavia and, let it be added, the Soviet Union, too.

Why the special treatment for the USSR? If I were IPSA I wouldn't hold a convention in Moscow or in Johannesburg.

What is so sad about this IPSA decision is that instead of helping dissidents, it hurts them because the Soviet party and government can boast that instead of being boycotted by Western intellectuals and academicians, these Westerners are flocking to Moscow to discuss political science—so, dear Citizen Dissident, forget the West and behave.

National Political Science Associations

PS is publishing the names, officers, publications and meeting dates of national political science associations around the world again this year. Further additions and/or corrections for this list will be welcome as well as news items on activities and programs of national associations.
