John N. Crossley is Emeritus Professor at Monash University, Melbourne, Australia where he was previously Professor of Pure Mathematics and then of Logic. He has published extensively on logic, theoretical computer science and the history of mathematics before 1700. He is part of a research group that has been working for several years on the Ars musicae of Johannes de Grocheio (published in the TEAMS series, 2011) and the Tractatus de tonis of Guy of Saint-Denis. His major current research relates to the Philippines in the late sixteenth century, with attention to Hernando de los Ríos Coronel (1559–1623/4) and a hitherto unpublished history of the Philippines from that period.

Sean Curran received his PhD in 2013 from the University of California, Berkeley, and is now a Junior Research Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. He is the winner of numerous awards, including the Alvin H. Johnson AMS-50 Dissertation Fellowship from the American Musicological Society, and the Grace Frank Award from the Medieval Academy of America.

Mikhail Lopatin is an Assistant Professor at the Moscow P.I. Tchaikovsky Conservatory. During the 2011–12 academic year he was a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis. His research focuses on late medieval canonic compositions, particularly those of the Italian Trecento.

Constant J. Mews is a Professor within the School of Philosophical, Historical & International Studies, Monash University, where he is Director of the Centre for Religious Studies. He has published widely on Abelard and Heloise, scholasticism, liturgy and religious life as well as on educated women in the medieval period, from Hildegard to Christine de Pizan. His current major research project relates to the encounter with religious diversity and the invention of theology in medieval Europe 1000–1300.

Carol Williams is an Adjunct Research Fellow at the Centre and Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Monash University. Trained as a musicologist, her particular research interests are in medieval music theory and performance practice.
