ISSUES IN SCIENCE AND RELIGION

IAN G. BARBOUR

This systematic analysis of past and present responses to the challenge of science in Western religious thought is one of the most comprehensive treatments available. It concentrates on three main issues: the power and the limits of scientific methods; the contribution of biochemical, evolutionary and other knowledge to our understanding of man; and the possibility of God's action in a law-abiding world (creation, providence, miracle, etc.). The uneasy relation of religion and science is traced from Galileo and Newton to the discovery of indeterminacy, the DNA molecule and the computer's 'intelligence'. The author suggests a number of areas of fruitful dialogue between the scientist of the theologian in the light of recent interpretations of the character of nature of the status of scientific theories.

Passion and Value in Hume's Treatise

PÁLL S. ÁRDAL

This is a new study of Hume's discussion of the Passions in Book II of the Treatise of Human Nature. Dr Árdal's patient and probing analysis offers an important re-interpretation of Hume's views about the evaluation of human character, in particular refuting the charge of inconsistency between Books II and III. He then demonstrates the close connection between Hume's doctrines about moral approval and disapproval in the latter Book and his discussion of pride, humility, love and hatred in Book II. 45s.

THE CONCEPT OF PHILOSOPHY

R. W. Newell

The author offers a critical examination of the fundamental habits of philosophical thinking, and challenges the traditional belief that valid argument must proceed either by deductive or causal reasoning. 32s 6d

THE GREEK PHILOSOPHERS

FROM THALES TO ARISTOTLE

W. K. C. Guthrie

A survey of the great age of Greek philosophy, which combines comprehensiveness with brevity. Professor Guthrie sets out the main themes of Greek philosophy and the literary and social environment which formed them, without presupposing a knowledge of Greek, thereby providing excellent material for both the specialist and the general reader.

THE BOUNDS OF SENSE: AN ESSAY ON KANT'S CRITIQUE OF PURE REASON

P. F. Strawson

"For anyone interested in the problems of Kant's philosophy, Strawson's book is an important one. His reading of the Critique is both sympathetic and constructive . . . an essential contribution to an understanding of critical philosophy." Campbell Black, Books and Bookman. 35s

SCEPTICISM AND THE FIRST PERSON

S. Coval

Dr Coval's thesis is, in part, that there is no effective symmetry between our personal and impersonal vocabulary, and reasons are mustered throughout to establish this symmetry. Reasons are given, however, to show why at least some personal self-ascriptions are, for contingent and economic reasons, allowed to function in ways our impersonal ascriptions are not. 25s

The Concept of Criticism

An Essay

F. E. SPARSHOTT

This philosophical essay seeks to create a secure and neutral underpinning for such conflicting theses as the basis of critical evaluations, the justification of interpretations and the status of criticism as a fine art. 35s net

The Logic of Saint Anselm

DESMOND PAUL
HENRY

This comprehensive account of Saint Anselm's logic reveals the full extent of his hitherto unsuspected sensitivity to problems which today are central philosophical issues. 50s net

Wordsworth

A Philosophical Approach

MELVIN RADER

This is a study of the fundamental ideas underlying Wordsworth's poetry, relating his thought to the vicissitudes of his life, to the influence of his friend Coleridge, and to the major traditions of philosophy. 38s net

Der Streit um die Existenz der Welt

Vol. I: Existentialontologie—XVI, 267 pages—Cloth—DM 32.—

Vol. II/1: Formalontologie 1 part—VIII, 454 pages—Cloth—DM 46.—

Vol. II/2: Formalontologie 2 part—VIII, 399 pages—Cloth—DM 42.—

“In his Contemporary European Philosophy Bochenski declared Ingarden’s work, The Controversy over the Existence of the World to be one of the most important philosophical publications of our time. The work had then been published only in Polish. Now Spor o istnienie swiata has become Der Streit um die Existenz der Welt, and the decisive language barrier has been broken. . . . If from a geographical point of view Ingarden may be on the periphery of Western philosophy, philosophically he has certainly placed himself well in the centre.”

NEW STUDIES IN ETHICS

Edited by W. D. Hudson

A new paperback series designed to meet the need for an up-to-date examination of the main types of ethical theory; when completed the thirteen monographs will cover the whole range of ethical theory from the Greek philosophers to the latest developments in contemporary moral philosophy. Each study is complete in itself and the whole series provides a unique treatment of the main philosophical problems in ethics.

THE FIRST FOUR TITLES

Greek Ethics

Pamela Huby

A convenient short account of the ethical thought of the Greeks, from the Sophists to the Stoics and Epicureans. 8s. 6d.

Ethical Intuitionism

W. D. Hudson

This study shows the philosophical background to the classical view that men are endowed with a faculty of moral intuition which enables them to know the difference between right and wrong. 8s. 6d.

Contemporary Moral Philosophy

G. J. Warnock

A critical survey of major trends in moral philosophy in English in the twentieth century. 8s. 6d.

Existentialist Ethics

Mary Warnock

The author draws attention to some common presuppositions of all existentialist writings by examining the work of Kierkegaard and Heidegger and some of the early work of Sartre. 7s. 6d.

MACMILLAN

CAMBRIDGE

The Cambridge History of Later Greek and Early Medieval Philosophy

Edited by: A. H. ARMSTRONG

A detailed survey of philosophy from the neo-Platonists to St Anselm, showing how Greek philosophy took the form in which it was known to its cultural inheritors, and how they interpreted it. The dominant figure is Plotinus but full attention is given to the most important Greek, Latin, pagan, Christian, Jewish and Moslem thinkers.

95s. net

Empiricism and Ethics

D. H. MONRO

Are moral statements objectively true, or do they express a subjectivist preference? Professor Monro, the author of a number of books and articles on moral philosophy, examines both views and presents a detailed defence of the subjectivist position. This important and original contribution to the theory of ethics will be valuable for students and professional philosophers.
