

Ecclesiastical History Society

The aim of the society is to foster the study of ecclesiastical history viewed in a wide historical context and broad inter-disciplinary relationship, and without regard to denominational differences or divisions. Regular meetings and conferences are held, and membership is open to scholars of all nationalities by election upon nomination, and to libraries and institutions.

Studies in Church History is an annually published series comprising papers and communications delivered at the society's conferences, and each volume presents important new work, by established as well as by younger scholars, upon a particular theme. Volumes are available to members of the society at a reduced price. The most recent previous volume (1982) is:

13. The Orthodox Churches and the West

350 pages (1976)

'... the ever-valuable Studies in Church History ... a beguiling combination of ... stimulating reappraisals, solid extensions of current research interests and fully-explored minutiae ... contains several articles of considerable importance and scholarly weight.'

(JEFFREY RICHARDS, Religion)

'The volume should be of real value to western medievalists as well as to Byzantine scholars, to theologians and churchmen as well as to advanced students and teachers of theological schools and seminaries.'

(Church History)

'Twenty superb essays on the relationship of Eastern Orthodox Churches to western government and society make up this excellent study.'

(Church and State)

'This collection of studies is a valuable addition to a distinguished series ... The studies I have mentioned give but an indication of the richness of this volume ... (which) is excellently produced.'

(PHILIP SHERRARD, JEH).

14. Renaissance and Renewal in Christian History

428 pages (1977), illustrated

'... both illuminates familiar topics in a new way and opens up fresh avenues for research. In addition, it maintains the high standards of scholarship set by previous volumes in this series ...'

(Times Literary Supplement)

'... the main significance of this volume seems to me to be in the manner in which it demonstrates the continuous and universal application of the concept of renewal to the Christian churches. There is scarcely a century of Christian history which is not represented ... The individual essays vary considerably in length but their quality is consistently high.'

(Archiv für Reformationsgeschichte Literaturbericht)

15. Religious Motivation: Biographical and Sociological Problems for the Church Historian

516 pages (1978)

'The now established series 'Studies in Church History' goes on apace and this volume ... breaks new ground ... Pride of place must be given to the Presidential Address by Professor John McManners ... This is a masterly survey.'

(C. W. Dugmore, Journal of Ecclesiastical History)

16. The Church in Town and Countryside

486 pages (1979)

'The message of this volume is clear: that town and countryside, and the tension between them, forms a major theme in the history of European civilization. When Christianity was added, as a new ingredient, the tensions were often increased ... intended for those whose special interest is in ecclesiastical history ... but for the general reader ... there are many good things in this volume.'

(British Book News)

'Each volume of Studies in Church History contains a splendid variety of stuff, and this is a particularly large and fascinating volume. As always one is given new and illuminating information about the things one knows something about already, and enchanting glimpses into ones about which one has hitherto known nothing at all ... the book is a snip.'

(Peter Hinchcliff, Journal of Theological Studies)

Subsidia 1. Medieval Women

400 pages (1978)

'... almost all the contributions to this volume provide valuable new insights into the life of medieval women.'

(Emma Mason, History)

'... an impressively comprehensive collection.'

(G. R. Evans, Journal of Theological Studies)

'... absolutely essential for academic libraries'. (Choice)

Subsidia 2. Continental Reformers and the English Reformation

350 pages (1980)
