Political Parties after Communism

Developments in East-Central Europe

Tomáš Kostelecký

After forty years of one-party rule under communist regimes, how were the countries of East-Central Europe to get back to the business of competitive politics in 1989? One key factor was the resumption of party politics, and this book reviews the postcommunist development of political parties in the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, and Hungary. Tomáš Kostelecký describes party history up to 1947—some earlier parties were resurrected in 1989—and then covers the communist and postcommunist periods. Historical, cultural, and social factors in party development are all taken into account.

Entangled Evolutions

The Media and Democratization in Eastern Europe

Peter Gross

How are the media, civil society, and political culture related in societies in transition? And can changes in these relationships be anticipated? To address these questions, Entangled Evolutions examines media in post-1989 Eastern Europe. It studies the effects of privatization of the media, journalists' relations to political figures, institutional structures such as media laws, professional journalistic culture, and the media's relation to their market.

Rural Reform in Post-Soviet Russia

edited by David J. O'Brien and Stephen K. Wegren

Rural Reform in Post-Soviet Russia reviews change in agricultural and rural life since 1990 through historical, political, sociological, and anthropological investigation. The contributors' interest is not so much in agriculture itself but in agrarian issues such as the relationship between rural interests and changing Russian institutions, the economic and social organization of rural households, and the quality of life in rural families and villages.

Beyond State Crisis?

Post-Colonial Africa and Post-Soviet Eurasia in Comparative Perspective

edited by Mark Beissinger and
M. Crawford Young

"This is a serious and important book that makes a contribution to our understanding of state effectiveness, state breakdown, and violence in Africa and Eurasia. The comparison between the two broad regions is creatively handled and introduced. The individual chapters, all by prominent experts in their fields, are based on solid research and offer insights that are original and of considerable policy importance. If you want to know how weak states work—or don't work—this book is essential reading."—Charles King, Georgetown University

The Georgetown Book Prize in International Relations

The Georgetown Book Prize in International Relations is awarded annually by the Mortara Center for International Studies in the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service and the Department of Government of Georgetown University in memory of Joseph S. Leggold, Associate Professor of Government and International Relations (1954-2001). The prize, which includes a $1,000 honorarium and an invitation to address a gathering in honor of the recipient, is awarded to the author of the book, published during the preceding calendar year, which makes an exceptional contribution to the study of international relations and international security studies.

We invite submissions from publishers and from third parties. The competition is restricted to single and co-authored books. Edited volumes will not be considered and books must be published in English. Eligible books for the 2002 award must be copyrighted in 2001.

Nominations will be accepted until August 1, 2002. Letters of nomination by publishers or by third parties accompanied by three nonreturnable copies of the book should be sent to the address below. Selection for the Georgetown Prize is made by a faculty committee on the basis of books submitted.

Submissions should be sent to:

PAPER COMPETITION

Institute of War and Peace Studies

Columbia University

The Institute of War and Peace Studies offers three prizes of $5000 each for the best papers developing ideas for dealing with problems of political violence, including civil and international wars, ethnic violence, genocide, and terrorism. Papers should be grounded in a systematic analysis of the causes of political violence and should emphasize practical prescriptions following from the analysis. They should be accessible to a wide audience, and advance proposals of a general nature for mitigating violent conflict. We encourage applications from those at the early stages of their career, including graduate students, as well as established experts. Papers should be article length (20-40 double spaced pages), and should not have been published as of the date of submission. No electronic submissions will be accepted. Winning papers will be selected by a panel of distinguished academic and non-academic judges affiliated with a variety of institutions. Papers must be submitted no later than March 1, 2003, to:

Korean Endgame

A Strategy for Reunification and U.S. Disengagement

Selig S. Harrison

“Selig Harrison has written the best book to appear on the Korean problem in many years. It is the summing up of thirty-five years of close observation by one of America’s best analysts, who marries the curiosity of a great investigative reporter to the contemporary policy concerns of someone in close touch with debates in Washington.”—Bruce Cumings, author of The Origins of the Korean War
