THE TELEPHONE ENTERPRISE

The Evolution of the Bell System's
Horizontal Structure, 1876–1909

Robert W. Garnet

In a study based extensively on previously untapped sources from the archives of AT&T, Robert Garnet charts the horizontal development of the Bell System by examining the technical, legal, operational, and administrative relationships that arose between the parent company and its associated telephone businesses. $22.50

THE ANATOMY OF A BUSINESS STRATEGY

Bell, Western Electric, and the Origins of the American Telephone Industry

George David Smith

In The Anatomy of a Business Strategy George David Smith analyzes the remarkable history of the acquisition of Western Electric by the American Bell Telephone Company and provides a timely reminder that modern telecommunications began as a risky entrepreneurial venture in an unregulated, competitive market. $20.00

FROM INVENTION TO INNOVATION

The Case of Long-Distance Telephone
Transmission at the Turn of the Century

Neil Wasserman

Neil Wasserman studies the invention and implementation of loading, the particular innovation that made the extension of long-distance service possible, and tells the story of the first application of modern scientific theory to the problems of telephone transmission. $17.50

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY PAPERS and NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY PAPERS

W. Thomas White, Editor

University Publications of America's new collection of Great Northern (GN) and Northern Pacific (NP) records has been edited from the voluminous original documents held by the Minnesota Historical Society, St. Paul. The holdings are so large that the collections concentrate on major files (a total of over 50,000 pages) from just a few broad areas: corporate policies, labor relations, and settlement and development activities. Through the board of directors' minutes and corporate histories, which cover thousands of pages of largely untapped files, researchers can trace key developments in corporate structure, management, and finances. Such detailed corporate planning and operations files for companies as large and influential as the GP and NP have never been published until now. In the area of labor relations, files of both railways provide a wide range of documentation on the experiences of workers from the early 1880s to the period of company unionism that followed the 1922 Shopmen's Strike. With regard to settlement and development, the files demonstrate that the railroads paid close attention to and actively promoted agriculture and other industries within the territories they serviced and launched vigorous campaigns to recruit farmers and others to settle in the newly opened lands. Chronologically, our published collections cover the early 1860s through the early 1920s, with occasional files extending into the 1930s. Subsequent collections covering the mid 1920s through the mid 1940s are now being planned.

The Editor

W. Thomas White (Ph.D., University of Washington) is Curator, James J. Hill Papers, James Jerome Hill Reference Library, and has written extensively on railroads and railroad workers.

Those interested in corporate strategies, labor relations, and land disposal and settlement patterns will find these materials of enormous value. I highly recommend these documents.

—Dr. H. Roger Grant, Professor of History, University of Akron

This is a very rich compendium of material documenting the social and economic history of the Northwest in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

—Dr. Robert E. Burke, Professor of History, University of Washington

Newcomen Awards in Business History

For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year the Society will award a prize of $300 and a scroll. For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year by a graduate student or a recent Ph.D. who has not published a book in business history, the Society will award a special prize of $150 and a scroll. Criteria for selection include originality, value, breadth and interest of contribution, quality of research materials and methods, and quality of presentation.

Winners will be selected by a panel of judges consisting of the editors and the members of the editorial board of the Business History Review, none of whom shall be eligible to receive a prize. The awards are administered by the editorial office of the Review. No special prize will be awarded in years when, in the opinion of the judges, no eligible article suitable for the prize was published, and no person may be awarded both prizes in any one year.

Thomas Newcomen Book Award in Business History

The Newcomen Society of the United States, in cooperation with the Business History Review, will award in 1985 the eighth in a series of triennial prizes consisting of $1,000 and a scroll for the best book on the history of business published in the United States between 1982 and 1984. "Business history" is defined in its broadest sense to include not only the history of firms or industries, but books tracing interactions of businessmen, analyses of business philosophy or behavior, and studies of the adjustment of businesses and businessmen to their economic, political, and social environments. Criteria for selection will include contribution to knowledge, depth of analysis, soundness of reasoning, clarity of style and organization, and general readability and format.

Appropriate time by the Harvard Business School and the Newcomen Society of the United States.
