

versity in England for the academic year 1957-58.

Francis Dunham Wormuth of the University of Utah will be visiting professor at the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science of the New School for Social Research, New York, during the academic year 1957-58.

APPOINTMENTS AND STAFF CHANGES

Mino Adenwalla has joined the political science faculty at Kenyon College.

Myer Alpert has been promoted to assistant director of operations research of Slick Airways, Inc. and has been named acting-director of its operations research department.

David E. Apter has been appointed an assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago.

Ivan Asay has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration of The American University as lecturer in research administration.

Frederick C. Barghoorn has been promoted to the rank of professor of political science at Yale University.

Robert Baum has been promoted to the rank of professorial lecturer in African Governments in the school of government and public administration at the American University.

William T. Bluhm, previously in the department of political science at Brown University, has accepted appointment as assistant professor of government at the University of Rochester, beginning September 1957.

Norman Blume has been promoted to the rank of assistant professor of political science at the University of Toledo.

Kathleen R. Bott was appointed an instructor in political science at Vassar College in February, 1957.

J. Cudd Brown has resigned from the department of political science at the University of Oregon to accept appointment as assistant professor of political science at San Francisco State College.

Richard G. Brown has been promoted to the rank of adjunct professor in comparative government in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Geoffrey Carnog of the University of Minnesota has been appointed an instructor in the department of political science at Michigan State University beginning Fall of 1957.

Joseph Y. Chennault has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration of The American University as lecturer in police administration.

Harlan Cleveland was inaugurated on March 8 as dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University.

William L. Day resigned as executive assistant to State Auditor Lloyd Morey, Springfield, Illinois in January to take a position as consultant with the Governments Division, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce.

Karl W. Deutsch has been appointed professor of international politics at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, in addition to continuing as professor of history and political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Robert G. Dixon, Jr., has resigned as associate professor of government and politics at the University of Maryland to accept appointment as associate professor in the Law School, George Washington University.

George Bell Dyer has been appointed lecturer in political science at Yale University for the year 1957-58.

Carol M. Edler has been appointed instructor in political science at the University of Wisconsin.

William H. Eells of Ohio Wesleyan University was named by Governor C. William O'Neill of Ohio as an administrative aide starting March 1. Among Eells' duties are to serve as executive secretary of the Governor's Council On Atomic Energy, and director of public relations for the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation.

Hugh L. Elsbree of the Library of Congress has been appointed chairman of the department of political science at Wayne State University effective April 1.

Rowland Egger has been appointed chairman of the department of political science, University of Virginia. He continues as director of the Woodrow Wilson department of foreign affairs.

Richard F. Fenno, Jr., formerly of Amherst College, has accepted a position as assistant professor of government at the University of Rochester beginning September 1957.

Thomas M. Franck, assistant professor of law, University of Nebraska, has been appointed associate professor of international law at New York University to succeed Clyde Egleton who retired in February.

Samuel K. Gove has become executive assistant to the State Auditor, State of Illinois.

Ernest Griffith, director of legislative reference service of the Library of Congress has been appointed dean of American University's school of international service.

Morton Grodzins, professor and chairman of the department of political science of the University of Chicago, has been appointed Chicago's first Ford Research professor in governmental affairs.

Raymond H. Gusteson has been appointed chairman of the department of government at Ohio University.

A Chester Hanford, professor of government Harvard University, will retire this summer.

Hanford served as dean of Harvard College for twenty years from 1927 to 1947, longer than any other person in Harvard history. He has been with the University since 1915, teaching government before becoming dean.

In his 42 years at Harvard, Hanford helped initiate many important reforms, including the House system, the National Scholarship Program, the tutoring and the beginning of General Education.

When Hanford retired from the dean's office, Paul H. Buck, then provost of the University, remarked, "Above all, he will be remembered as a humane counselor of youth—a man who gave understanding and endless hours to multifold problems of individual students."

Royce Hanson has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration at The American University as instructor in government.

Samuel Hendel and Norman J. Powell of the department of government at the City College of New York have been promoted to the rank of professor. During the academic year 1956-57 Professor Powell has been serving the Board of Higher Education as consultant on personnel.

Oliver W. Holmes has been promoted to the rank of professorial lecturer in records management in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Thomas Hovet, Jr., formerly of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, has been appointed assistant professor of government at New York University.

Stanley L. Johnson, director of the civic center division of the school of public administration of the University of Southern California, has resigned to accept the position of executive secretary of the Los Angeles Bar Association. He begins his duties on May 1, 1957.

Marc Karson, formerly of Washburn University, is now associate professor of government at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Illinois.

C. Mansel Keene has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration of The American University as lecturer in personnel administration.

John Kieffer has been promoted to the rank of professorial lecturer in comparative government in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Louis W. Koenig of New York University has been promoted to professor of political science.

Walter Kurylo has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration at The American University as lecturer in public budgeting.

Robert E. Lane has been promoted to the rank of associate professor of political science at Yale University.

Robert S. Lorch has joined the staff of the social sciences department at the Georgia Institute of Technology. Mr. Lorch is finishing the work for his doctor's degree at the University of Wisconsin.

Conrad McBride has been appointed instructor of political science at the University of Colorado. His duties also include part-time work with the bureau of state and community service at the same institution.

John P. McCarthy, formerly of Purdue University Center, Fort Wayne Indiana, has been appointed assistant professor of politics at the Catholic University of America.

Joseph D. McGoldrick of Brooklyn, former Comptroller of the City of New York and New York State Rent Administrator, has been appointed chairman of the department of political science and full professor at Queens College by the Board of Higher Education as of May 1, 1957.

Gerard Mangone has been appointed associate professor at the Maxwell School, Syracuse University, where during the coming year he will participate in a research project on the education and training of Americans for public service overseas.

Seymour Z. Mann has been promoted to associate professor of political science at Harpur College.

Curtis Martin of the University of Colorado was elected chairman of the division of political science upon the completion of a two-year term as chairman of the department of social sciences at the same institution.

Roger H. Marz, a doctoral candidate at Michigan State University, has been appointed instructor in political science at Wayne State University.

John Brown Mason, visiting professor of the department of political science of the University of Florida, has been appointed professor of government at Georgetown University.

Ernest G. Miller, formerly of Princeton University, has been appointed instructor at Dartmouth College.

Emmet V. Mittlebeeler has been promoted to the rank of associate professor in government and public administration in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Steven Muller has joined the department of political science at Haverford College as assistant professor of political science.

Frank Munger has been promoted to the rank of assistant professor in the department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

Fred Warner Neal has resigned his position as assistant professor of political science at the University of Colorado to accept a position as associate professor of journalism at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Louise Overacker will retire from her position in the department of political science at Wellesley College in June, 1957.

L. Vincent Padgett of Texas Technological College has been appointed assistant professor of political science at San Diego State College.

Anthony Pearce, of the University of California, has been appointed as an instructor in political science and in the humanities program at San Jose College.

Howard R. Penniman has resigned as division chief of the United States Information Agency to become professor of American government at Georgetown University.

Charles A. Phillips has been promoted to the rank of professorial lecturer in public management in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Paul Piccard, who was visiting lecturer in the department of political science at the Florida State University 1955-56, is now field representative and research associate, Florida Citizens Tax Council.

Palmer C. Pilcher of the department of political science, Wayne State University, has been appointed to the position of administrative officer of the graduate school at Wayne State University.

Frank A. Pinner has been promoted to the rank of assistant professor at Michigan State University.

S. J. Pomrenze has been promoted to the rank of professorial lecturer in records admini-tration in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Robert V. Presthus has been promoted to professor of public administration in the graduate school of business and public administration at Cornell University, and has assumed the editorship of The Administrative Science Quarterly, a journal devoted to increasing the understanding of administration through empirical research and theoretical analysis.

Eugene Price, who is currently completing his PhD dissertation at the University of California, has been appointed instructor in political science at San Jose State College beginning with the fall term.

Coleman B. Ransone, formerly of the University of Alabama, has been appointed professor of government at the College of William and Mary where he will conduct a program of teaching and research in the field of public administration.

Merton L. Reichler, a fellow at the Brookings Institution, has received an appointment as assistant professor at Wellesley College.

Edward J. Rozek was appointed assistant professor at the University of Colorado effective with the fall semester, 1956.

Howard Scarrow of Duke University has been appointed assistant professor at Michigan State University in the department of political science effective Fall, 1957.

Richard F. Schier has been promoted to associate professor in the government department of Franklin and Marshall College.

Robert G. Scigliano has been promoted to the rank of assistant professor at Michigan State University.

Harry M. Scoble, Jr. has been appointed assistant professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin.

Ralph Smuckler, associate professor of political science at Michigan State University has been appointed assistant dean of the international programs at that institution.

Edmund E. Spellacy, of the department of government at the University of Hawaii, has been named dean of the college of general studies at that university.

T. Noel Stern left his position as director of the Fondation des Etats-Unis (United Nations House) last July, to become a Public Administration Training Officer with the United Nations Technical Assistance Administration. He is serving as acting chief of the U.N. Mission to Addis Ababa, and has helped establish an Imperial Ethiopian Institute of Public Administration at the University of Addis Ababa, with the personal support of His Imperial Majesty, Haile Selassie I.

Joseph Tanenhaus, assistant professor of political science at New York University, has been promoted to the rank of associate professor.

Karl Trever has been appointed to the faculty of the school of government and public administration at The American University as lecturer in archives administration.

Henry A. Turner has been promoted to the rank of associate professor of political science at the University of California, Santa Barbara College. He served as visiting professor of political science at the University of Nebraska during the 1956 summer session.

Charles A. Ullmann has been promoted to the rank of adjunct professor in public administration in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Paul van der Veur has joined the government department of the University of Hawaii as assistant professor of government, previously serving as co-director of the Indonesia research project at Yale University.

John Vanderzell has been promoted to associate professor in the government department of Franklin and Marshall College.

Carlo Valentino and George D. Wendel have been appointed to the staff of the government department of St. Louis University as instructors in government.

Richard W. Van Wagenen will resign his position as director of The Center for Research on World Political Institutions at Princeton University to become dean of the graduate school and professor of international relations and organization at The American University.

Paul P. Van Riper of the graduate school of business and public administration at Cornell University has received an appointment as full professor of public administration in this school, effective July 1, 1957. Mr. Van Riper has been designated director of the doctoral program at the school.

Ralph M. Wade has been promoted to a full professorship in political science at the University of Wyoming.

Maurice Waters, formerly of the Green Bay extension division of the University of Wisconsin, has become an instructor in the department of political science at Wayne State University.

Ellsworth E. Weaver of the department of political science, University of Utah, and business manager of the Western Political Quarterly, has been promoted to full professor.

H. Bradford Westerfield, assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago, has been appointed assistant professor of political science at Yale University.

Howard B. White of the graduate faculty of political and social science of the New School for Social Research, New York, has been advanced to the rank of full professor.

Robert F. Wilcox has been promoted to the rank of professor of political science at San Diego State College.

Sidney Wise has been promoted to associate professor in the government department of Franklin and Marshall College.

Teh-yao Wu, dean of the college of arts, Tunghai University, Taichung, Taiwan, was recently awarded a chair in social science by the Princeton-in-Asia Foundation.

IN MEMORIAM

Frederick Morgan Davenport—The ninety years enjoyed by Frederick Morgan Davenport were productively filled with a broad and rich variety of public services. His life span included a unique and varied array of separate yet intermingled careers all of which contributed to the advancement of the American public service. As a preparatory school teacher, as a university professor, and even as a minister of the gospel he offered to young people the challenge of public affairs. In this teaching he displayed the rare ability to blend the realities of governmental problems with the highest ethical and moral standards.

This career of teaching was supplemented through active participation in the activities of governmental bodies. He served in the interest of better state government in the State Senate at Albany and he actively campaigned for high office in New York State. He contributed substantial leadership in the financial reorganization of the State and in the initiation of forward-looking legislative programs. But even more important, he became a vigorous and effective adviser to State leaders who subsequently advanced to key roles on the national scene.

He followed these leaders to Washington when he was elected to Congress. There he served actively and with distinction for a period of eight years. He once again offered his talents in the taxation field through his membership on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Following this tour in Congress he became deeply interested in the growing need of the federal government for talented men and women who would contribute a productive career in the public interest. He gave this problem sustained study and founded and for fifteen years directed the National Institute of Public Affairs which brought to Washington highly selected graduate students from colleges and universities and gave them a year of training and apprenticeship in federal administrative posts. The success of this program is evidenced by its general emulation on the part of the federal departments and agencies at the present time.

But he served yet another career: that of a federal executive. He was appointed by President Franklin Roosevelt to organize and head the first Federal Personnel Council, a co-ordinating group designed to promote through cooperative action the constructive development of personnel administration in the federal service. Although he was seventy-three when appointed he provided strong and positive leader-