gel, New York; Ralph S. Regula, Ohio; and Martin Olav Sabo, Minnesota.

The ceremony was conducted by Alan Rosenthal, the Director of the Eagleton Institute.

LEON EPSTEIN Elected to American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Leon Epstein, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and former President of the American Political Science Association, is one of the 75 leading scholars, scientists, public figures and artists recently elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, which was founded in 1780 by John Adams and other leading intellectuals of the nation in its early days.

IPSA Study Group on Armed Forces and Society

The Study Group on Armed Forces and Society is now an official affiliate of the International Political Science Association. First organized at the IPSA World Congress in Moscow, 1979, the Study Group has developed into an organization of almost 100 scholars and academicians representing over 30 countries. The members of the Executive Committee are Alexandre Barros (Brazil), Anton Bebler (Yugoslavia), Sam C. Sarkesian (U.S.), and Boris G. Sapozhnikov (USSR). A fifth member of the Executive Committee will be appointed shortly. Sam C. Sarkesian is the organizer of the Study Group. The purpose of the Study Group is to provide an international forum for the study of armed forces and society with particular attention to civil-military relations, the military role in the political system, and the military educational system. Plans are underway for presenting two sessions at the IPSA World Congress in Rio, August, 1982. The Study Group will organize one official and one unofficial session. The co-chairpersons of the sessions are Alexandre Barros and Sam C. Sarkesian. Formal papers on a theme on armed forces and society will be presented at both sessions. For further information on the Study Group or the sessions to be presented at the Rio Congress contact Professor Sam C. Sarkesian, President, IPSA Study Group on Armed Forces and Society, c/o Department of Political Science, Loyola University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois 60626, U.S.A.

MARINE AFFAIRS Program

The University of Southern California has inaugurated a master's degree program in marine affairs, focusing primarily on marine policy. Courses on law of the sea, maritime policy, coastal management, and related subjects will be offered. Interested persons should contact Dr. Robert Friedheim, Institute for Marine and Coastal Studies, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California 90007.

University of ILLINOIS Diamond Jubilee

Plans are being made by the Political Science Department of the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, for a "Diamond Jubilee" on November 20-21, 1981, in celebration of the (approximately) 75th anniversary of the Department. Celebrations will include a convocation of invited speakers with panel discussions, a special dinner, and other opportunities for alumni and former faculty in political science at the University of Illinois to reunite.

Inter-University Seminar on ARMED FORCES and SOCIETY Chairman

Professor Sam C. Sarkesian, Department of Political Science, Loyola University of Chicago, has been appointed Chairman of the Inter-University Seminar on Armed Forces and Society. Dr. Sarkesian previously served as the organization's Executive Secretary and Associate Chairman. The Inter-University Seminar (IUS) consists of over 800 "Fellows" representing a variety of disciplines and includes academicians, private and public researchers, and representatives from various government agencies. The main purpose of the IUS is to provide a focal point and channel for research, dialogue, and information dissemination for interested individuals whose teaching and/or study includes armed forces and society. The IUS is international in scope with fellows from many foreign countries. Armed Forces and Society is the official journal of the IUS. The IUS also publishes annually a volume in the Sage Research Series on War, Revolution, and Peacekeeping. The general editor for the Annual is Sam C. Sarkesian. Recent publications in this series include Combat Effectiveness: Cohesion, Stress, and the Volunteer Military edited by Sam C. Sarkesian, and Military Leadership, edited by James Buck and Lawrence Korb. In addition to these publications, the IUS publishes other works dealing with armed forces and society. The IUS conducts and sponsors a number of regional, national, and international conferences focusing on the theme of armed forces and society. For information on the IUS and its publications contact: Abby Chack, Executive Secretary, IUS, Box 46, 1126 E. 59th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637.

International Council on the Future of the UNIVERSITY Inc.

The International Council on the Future of the University held its Third International Meeting in Lisbon, Portugal, last April 27-30, 1981, on the topic, "The Pursuit of Truth in a Changing World." Participants from 20 countries took part in the four-day meeting. It was an opportunity for more than 100 scholars, many of them with leading reputations in their different fields (and representing roughly one-third of the membership) to review the changes which ICFU foresaw for Western universities in the early part of the seventies and to assess how the important calling of these institutions would change further in the decade ahead. The meeting provided many of the participants with their first exposure to the post-revolution structure and problems of Portuguese universities (which were used as a case study in the meeting). It provided Portuguese scholars with a unique encounter with eminent scholars from other Western democracies.

Paul Seabury, University of California, Berkeley, has been elected Chairman of the Council; Hans Daalder, University of Leiden; Peter Graf Kielmansegg, University of Cologne; and James Q. Wilson of Harvard University have been elected to the Council's Board of Trustees. For information on the Council, its address is: 745 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10022.

PI SIGMA ALPHA Chapter Installations

Ten new chapters of Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, have recently been installed. The Chapters are: Mu Alpha at Radford University; Mu Delta at Hartwick College; Mu Epsilon at Mars Hills College; Mu Eta at Rutgers University, Camden; Mu Gamma at the University of Baltimore; Mu Iota at Mount Saint Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Maryland; Mu Kappa at Southeastern Massachusetts University; Mu Lambda at Central Washington University; Mu Theta at the Catholic University of America; and Mu Zeta at Baldwin-Wallace College.

POLICY Studies Articles Invited

The Policy Studies Organization is planning a series of symposia during 1982 dealing with political and social science aspects of alternative public policies in various subject matter areas. Manuscript ideas are invited on each of the topics. A short description of the proposed ideas should be submitted to the editors listed below who are in the political science departments of their respective universities unless indicated otherwise. Ideas that are especially relevant will be encouraged to be developed into areas for the Policy Studies Journal or the Policy Studies Review and then into book chapters for the booklength versions in the Policy Studies Organization Series of Lexington Books.

For 1982, the symposia will tentatively consist of the following in roughly chronological order:

"Applied Poverty Policy," Richard Goldstein, 87 Bennett Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02135; and Stephen Sachs, Purdue University-Indiana University at Indianapolis.

"Regulatory Policy," Mel Dubnick, University of Kansas at Lawrence; and Alan Gitelson, Loyola University of Chicago.

"Judicial Reform," Philip Dubois, University of California at Davis.

"Criminal Corrections Policy," Jameson Doig, Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton, New Jersey.

"Interest Groups and Public Policy," David Linowes, University of Illinois at Urbana; and Harmon Zeigler, University of Oregon at Eugene.

"Rural Policy," Don Hadwiger, Iowa State University at Ames; and William Browne, Central Michigan University at Mt. Pleasant.

"Public Policy Toward Risk," Susan Hadden, LBJ School, University of Texas at Austin; and Jared Hazelton, Graduate School of Public Affairs, University of Washington at Seattle.

"Personnel Policy," David Rosenbloom, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

"Policy Toward Public-Private Relations," Dennis Thompson, Brigham Young University at Provo.

Short general articles are also welcome as non-symposium comments to be published in issues containing symposia. They should be sent to either Tom Dye of the Policy Studies Center, Florida State University at Tallahassee, or Dennis Palumbo of the Center for Public Affairs, University of Kansas at Lawrence. They are the editors-in-chief of the Policy Studies Journal and the Policy Studies Review, respectively. Subscriptions to both the PSJ and the PSR can be obtained for $12 a year from the Policy Studies Organization, 361 Lincoln Hall, University of Illinois at Urbana, 61801. The $12 covers both journals simultaneously plus two free directories. PSO directories are now available describing policy studies activities among academic programs, governmental agencies, funding sources, research centers, individual researchers, and publishers/associations. Subscribers and PSO members are especially welcome from among people interested in a political or social science approach to policy studies.

WOMEN and Politics Series

Rita Mae Kelly, Rutgers University, 401 Cooper Street, Camden, New Jersey 08102; and Ruth B. Mendel, Center for the American Women and Politics, Eagleton Institute of Politics, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08901, are developing a new series of books on women and politics to be published by Praeger Publisher. The work will have two components: supplementary textbooks for use in undergraduate political science courses, and books reporting new research on women and politics. Individuals interested in more information on the series should contact Professor Kelly or Dr. Mandel.

Apple Interactive Data ANALYSIS

AIDA is a full-featured statistical analysis system for the Apple II, designed by a professional social scientist to perform the data manipulation and statistical analyses most needed in academic and marketing research. The program builds self-descriptive data files on the disk, then recalls variables by a "virtual memory" process as they are referenced by the user. Up to 11,000 data points may reside in memory at once, allowing a maximum of over 4,000 cases in analysis. Sub-setting, transformation, missing data and case weights are supported.

Statistics include: mean, variance, distributions, histograms, two-way tables (with Chi-square), Pearson and rank correlation, pair and standard t-tests, ANOVA, and multiple linear regression. Uses provisional means algorithms for accuracy of variances and cross-products, and computes significance levels. Data may be input from text files, or through an enter and verify routine. Users may modify program code, or write their own "special" commands. AIDA requires 48K with Applesoft, and at least one Disk II; works with Corvus. $235.

HERBERT A. SIMON Award

Frank J. Thompson and Clyde Tucker of the University of Georgia have won the Herbert A. Simon Award for the outstanding article in volume two of the International Journal of Public Administration. The Thompson/Tucker article is titled, "Professionalism and Regionalism: The Case of Hiring Orientations in the South."

Serving on the Simon Award Committee were John Rehfuss, California State University, Sacramento, Committee Chair; Edward B. Lewis, University of Alabama in Birmingham; Susan A. MacManus, University of Houston; Marvin Meade, Kent State University; Hal G. Rainey, Florida State University; J. D. Strick, University of Windsor; and Charlie B. Tyer, University of South Carolina.

MICHIGAN JOURNAL of Political Science

The Department of Political Science of the University of Michigan has announced publication of the Michigan Journal of Political Science. The journal is edited by undergraduates at the University of Michigan and provides a forum for publication for undergraduate and graduate students. The editor-in-chief of the journal is Michael E. Smith. Subscriptions are $5 a year and are available by writing to the Michigan Journal of Political Science, 6619 Haven Hall, The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

UCLA Audio Tape Series

A new series of audio cassette tapes dealing with crucial questions about America's changing political institutions is now available through UCLA Extension.

Titled "Power in America," the series was written and is narrated by Leonard Freedman, professor of political science and Dean of Continuing Education, UCLA.

In the series he provides listeners with an opportunity to explore a variety of viewpoints on the working of power in America today, focusing on such key questions as: Who has power in America? Do we have a "power elite"— or is power widely distributed? Is power too concentrated at the center—or not enough? How responsive is government to the people's wishes?

Each of the 14 half-hour segments includes an introductory statement by Dr. Freedman, followed by dialogues with leading scholars, political commentators and public figures in American life.

In addition, background information and analysis, as well as selections from the National Archives and other tape libraries, are brought into the discussions to sharply juxtapose and illuminate the issues.

On each tape segment—whether the topic is Economic Power, Congressional Power, Judicial Power, the Media, Presidential Power, the Power of Ideas, or Public Opinion—a wide range of interpretations is presented to help listeners develop their own independent, informed judgments.

The tape series is designed for use in a variety of formats: for independent study, as an adult education discussion program, as a supplement to college course work on American government, and in conjunction with radio broadcasts.

Included with the seven cassette tapes is a student manual and special notes for use by instructors and discussion leaders. It is packaged in a vinyl tape binder. The price for the complete set is $64.

For complete information and a descriptive brochure, call (213) 825-2272, or write to: UCLA Extension, Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, Power in America Tapes, P.O. Box 24901, Los Angeles, California 90024.

Sourcebook of HARRIS NATIONAL SURVEYS

A Sourcebook of Harris National Surveys: Repeated Questions 1963-1976 has been published by the Institute for Research in Social Science of The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The volume, which is edited by Elizabeth Martin, Diana McDuffee, and Stanley Presser, is a compilation of all the repeated questions from 121 national surveys conducted by Louis Harris and Associates and archived at the Louis Harris Data Center at North Carolina. Almost 14,000 questions are arranged by topic and identified by survey and date. The sourcebook also includes an essay by Stanley Presser which describes Louis Harris survey procedures and advises the reader on the appropriate use of Harris data for analyzing trends. The sourcebook is intended as a reference tool for researchers who are interested in obtaining and using Harris data for the analysis of social change.

The publication of the sourcebook is made possible by a grant from the National Science Foundation to Elizabeth Martin (now of the National Academy of Sciences) and the late Frank J. Munger of the Institute for Research in Social Science. Funds were provided to design and implement a computerized question retrieval system which permits the user to search the contents of archived Harris polls. Although the retrieval system was designed to compile the listing of trend questions, it may be used to search for Harris questions on any topic of interest to researchers, and should make the Harris archive far more accessible than it has been in the past.

NSF funds provide for free distribution of a limited number of copies to libraries and research institutes. When free copies are no longer available, the Sourcebook may be purchased for $18. Orders should be sent to IRSS Publications, Institute for Research in Social Science, Manning Hall 026A, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514. Other inquiries about Harris data should be sent to Diana McDuffee, Director of the Social Science Data Library, at the same address.

HUMOROUS Material

Humorous material useful in teaching undergraduate sociology and other social sciences is being solicited for possible publication in a handbook of humorous teaching material that will be published by the American Sociological Association Teaching Resources Center.

Humorous material, in all forms—puns, one-liners, groaners, shaggy-dog stories, jokes, stories, fables, satires, parodies, parables, "routines," and visuals (cartoons and the like)—should be submitted with a description of how the material can best be used in teaching. Enough description should be provided so that other teachers can use the same material with (more or less) the same comic success. Original sources of the material, when known, should be included.

Contributors of material used in the handbook will receive credit for their contributions.

Send contributions to: David S. Adams, Sociology, The Ohio State University Lima Campus, Lima, Ohio 45804.

FLORIDA International University International Studies Program

Florida International University is inaugurating an interdisciplinary Master of Arts program in international studies in the fall semester 1981. For further information contact Dr. Farrokh Jhabvala, Florida International University, Tamiami Trail, Miami, Florida 33199; (305) 552-2555.

HUMBOLDT Journal

The Humboldt Journal of Social Relations, an interdisciplinary social science journal, is soliciting papers for consideration for publication in a special issue on the topic of socially appropriate technology. The issue will examine the social impacts of physical and behavioral technologies which have emerged in the last several years that are characterized as "appropriate." Examples include decentralized and passive solar energy systems; community gardens; community-based public services; democratic management; cooperative businesses; alternatives in the design, financing, and ownership of housing; and the like. The editors are particularly interested in: the social assumptions which underlie these activities; how well they are working and by what criteria they are judged; and their economic, social, and political impacts on the communities in which they are located. They welcome empirical, analytical, and theoretical articles, applied to both small and large cases.

The special issue is being edited by Professors Michael Hibbard and Carl Hosticka of the Wallace School of Community Service and Public Affairs, University of Oregon, Eugene, Oregon 97403. Inquiries regarding the special issue and manuscripts should be directed to them.

Manuscripts are to be submitted in ASA format and should be from 15 to 25 pages, double-spaced. An original and three copies must be submitted. Manuscripts must be received by February 1, 1982.

GRANT WRITING Seminar

The American Council on Education and the State University of New York College of Technology at Utica/Rome will co-sponsor a grant writing seminar series designed especially for higher education professionals on October 12-14 in Washington, D.C., and October 22-24 in New Orleans.

The seminars will examine ways to identify higher education funding sources, develop grant-winning ideas, interact with the funding sources, develop the major parts of a proposal, handle the post-application phase, and continue the grant process.

David G. Bauer, a nationally known grants expert and assistant to the president at the College of Technology, will conduct both seminars.

The program on October 12-14 will be held at Stouffer's National Conference Center Hotel in Arlington, Virginia, while the session on October 22-24 will be at the Marriott/French Quarters on Canal and Chartres Streets in New Orleans.

For registration information contact the College of Technology, SUNY Utica, 811 Court Street, Utica, New York 13502.

WCLA Program

During January of 1982, the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives will offer its sixth annual WINTERIM Program entitled The Reagan Administration and the 97th Congress: One Year Later. This three-week symposium, scheduled to operate between January 1-23, 1982, provides undergraduate, graduate and foreign students an opportunity to engage in concentrated study of domestic and international policy formulation and implementation while focusing on the Reagan Administration and the 97th Congress and utilizing the unique resources of Washington, D.C. Students generally earn three credit hours by their home college or university for this experience.

Participants will have the opportunity to examine the Reagan administration and the Congress as they relate to the following issue areas: U.S. Foreign Policy/Foreign Affairs, the Economy, Party Politics, Energy, Political News Reporting, Business/Government Relations and Human/Civil Rights. An Advanced Research Tract, directed by Professor Stephen Frantzich of the United States Naval Academy, accommodates the special research needs of upper-level undergraduate and graduate students.

WCLA will be expanding its Faculty Host Program for WINTERIM '82 and will continue to host (provide complementary housing) faculty members bringing a class of 13 or more students to Washington to participate in WINTERIM '82. Faculty hosts are incorporated into the program by delivering a lecture to a WCLA audience, by serving on a panel which highlights the faculty member's area of expertise, by accompanying students on site visits, or by becoming a resource person in small group discussions.

Costs for the program are as follows: $35 non-refundable application fee, $190 program fee, $200 housing fee for the three-week period, and $20 apartment maintenance fee. For additional information or applications, call or write WINTERIM '82, 1705 DeSales Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036; (202) 659-8510.

HEALTH Care and Minority Women

The Haworth Press, publishers of Women and Health, Health and Medical Care Services Review, Advances in Alcohol and Substance Abuse, and other journals, will be publishing a book in 1983 tentatively entitled Health Care and Minority Women. This book will be a study of the particular health care needs of minority women as they participate as consumers, providers, researchers, and advocates within the health care system. The book will feature outstanding minority women writers from all disciplines. Among the topical areas to be considered are the following: health status of minority women; reproductive health; minority women within the health professions; occupational health concerns of minority women; mental health services for minority women; health needs of undocumented and refugee women; lesbian health care; critique of the U.S. health care system; and advocacy needs of minority women.

Manuscripts should be typewritten in triplicate in standard publication format with text and references in index-medicus style, double-spaced. Manuscripts and correspondence should be sent to: Sandra A. Salazar, J.D., Editor, Consumer Advocate and Liaison, Office of External Affairs, California Department of Health Services, 714 P Street, Room 1240, Sacramento, California 95814. Deadline for all manuscripts is February 15, 1982.
