

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

SUSAN CAMPBELL, A.B. in Humanities, has worked as a research assistant in the Department of Anthropology, Harvard University, and is presently engaged in research for a public interest organization in Washington, D.C.

THOMAS W. CHURCH, JR. is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan. He received his A.B. from Whitman College and his Ph.D. from Cornell University. He is currently working on a study of the relationship of defense and prosecution bargaining strategies to disposition of criminal cases.

KLAUS-FRIEDRICH KOCH received his Ph.D. degree in Anthropology from the University of California at Berkeley. He has done field research on politics, law, and conflict in New Guinea and Fiji. He has taught at Harvard University from 1967-1974, and is currently a visiting associate professor at the University of Virginia. He plans to move to Northwestern University. His publications include War and Peace in Jalémó: The Management of Conflict in Highland New Guinea (Harvard University Press).

LEON S. ROBERTSON is Senior Behavioral Scientist at the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. His research is focused on legal and other measures that affect public health. He is co-author of Medical Sociology: A General Systems Approach.

H. LAURENCE ROSS is currently Visiting Fellow at the Center for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford. His principal research interests are in the operation of informal legal processes and in the impact of law on behavior. His major writings in these areas are respectively, Settled Out of Court (Aldine, 1970) and Law, Science and Accidents (American Bar Foundation, 1973). He is currently engaged in studies of the consumer complaint process and of the deterrent effect of drinking-and-driving legislation in Sandinavia. Effective September, 1976 he will be Director of the Program in Law and Social Sciences at the National Science Foundation.

AUSTIN SARAT, Assistant Professor of Political Science at Amherst College, is the author of the forthcoming book, The Rule of Law and the American Legal System. His recent publications include articles in the American Political Science Review, Amer- ican Journal of Political Science and Wisconsin Law Review. His current research includes a survey study of the role of lawyers in conflict resolution, an historical analysis of decision making in the United States Courts of Appeals and an examination of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

RICHARD D. SCHWARTZ is Provost and Dean of the Faculty of Law and Jurisprudence at the State University of New York at Buffalo, and former President of the Law and Society Association. He is the author of Criminal Law: Problems in the Promulgation, Invocation and Administration of a Law of Crimes (with R.C. Donnelly and Joseph Goldstein); Unobtrusive Measures: Nonreactive Research in the Social Sciences (with E.J. Webb, D.T. Campbell, and L. Sechrest); Society and the Legal Order (with Jerome H. Skolnick). He is currently working on a study of legal regulation of labor-management relations in India.

ALLAN E. SHAPIRO is a Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Haifa. He received his J.D. at Harvard in 1950. After practising in New York and Washington, where he served as Counsel to the National Enforcement Commission of the Economic Stabilization Administration, he settled in Israel in 1955 and joined Kibbutz Degania Aleph, working for many years in kibbutz financial administration. His interests are in comparative judicial politics. He is currently working on a study of constitutional development in Israel.

JOHN A. SODERGREN is a doctoral candidate in anthropology at Harvard University and a law student at the University of California at Berkeley. His specific research interests concern cross-cultural patterns of law and conflict management.