
CONTRIBUTORS

Kenneth S. Corts earned his Ph.D. in economics at Princeton University and is currently an Associate Professor at the University of Toronto's Rotman School of Management. His research interests lie in applied game theory and organizational economics.

Andy Denis is Senior Lecturer in Political Economy at City University, London, and Visiting Fellow, Centre for Philosophy of Natural and Social Science, LSE. His research is in the history and philosophy of economics, and he has published on Adam Smith, Keynes, and Hayek, and on the relationship between the micro and the macro in the history of economic thought.

Geoffrey M. Hodgson is Research Professor in the Business School, University of Hertfordshire, UK. He is the author of several books and over 80 articles in academic journals. His books include The Evolution of Institutional Economics (2004), How Economics Forgot History (2001), Economics and Evolution (1993), and Economics and Institutions (1988).

Jon Mandle is an Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Philosophy at the University at Albany (SUNY). He is the author of What's Left of Liberalism? (Lexington Books 2000) and the forthcoming Global Justice (Polity).

Philippe Mongin is Senior Research Professor (Directeur de recherche de 1e classe) at CNRS (Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique), Paris. His work relates to normative economics, decision theory, philosophical logic, and the philosophy of economics. He has contributed a number of French and English articles, as well as several collections, in these four areas. He was one of the general editors of Economics and Philosophy (1995–2000).

Kai Nielsen is an emeritus professor in the Philosophy Department of the University of Calgary and adjunct Professor of Philosophy at Concordia University. He is a past president of the Canadian Philosophical Association and a member of the Royal Society of Canada. His books include Equality and Liberty: A Defense of Radical Egalitarianism (Rowman and Allanheld 1985), Marxism and the Moral Point of View (Westriver Press 1989) and Nationalism without Foundations (Prometheus Books 1996). He is currently working on imperialism.

Jonas Olson is Official Fellow and Tutor in Philosophy at Brasenose College, Oxford. This review was written while he was an Assistant Lecturer at the University of Otago, New Zealand. He has published articles in Australasian Journal of Philosophy, Ethical Theory and Moral Practice, Inquiry, Philosophical Quarterly, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, Theoria and Utilitas.

John O'Neill is Professor of Philosophy at Lancaster University. He has written widely on the philosophy of economics, political theory, environmental policy, ethics and the philosophy of science. His books include Markets, deliberation and environment (Routledge forthcoming), The market: ethics, knowledge and politics (Routledge 1998) and Ecology, policy and politics: human well-being and the natural world (Routledge 1993).

Rodney G. Peffer is Professor of Philosophy at the University of San Diego. His publications include Marxism, Morality, and Social Justice (Princeton University Press 1990), "A Defense of Rights to Well Being," Philosophy and Public Affairs (1978), and "Towards a More Adequate Rawlsian Theory of Social Justice," Pacific Philosophical Quarterly (1994).

David Reidy (dreidy@utk.edu) is a lawyer turned political philosopher. His recent work has focused on, among other things, global justice issues. He is the co-editor of Universal Human Rights (forthcoming with Rowman and Littlefield) and A Realistic Utopia: Essays on Rawls's Law of Peoples (forthcoming with Blackwell) and is the 2005 winner of the American Philosophical Association's Berger Prize in the philosophy of law. He is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Tennessee.

Kok-Chor Tan (kctan@sas.upenn.edu) is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy, the University of Pennsylvania. He has interests in issues of distributive justice, human rights, nationalism, and global justice. He is the author of Toleration, Diversity, and Global Justice (Penn State Press 2000), and, more recently, Justice Without Borders (Cambridge University Press 2004).

Jack Russell Weinstein is an Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy and Religion at the University of North Dakota. He is the author of On Adam Smith (Wadsworth 2001) and On Alasdair MacIntyre (Wadsworth 2003). He is currently developing a non-Kantian liberal theory built on Adam Smith's moral psychology and philosophy of education. He can be reached at the Department of Philosophy and Religion, Box 7128, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, ND 58202-7128, USA. Or, at jack.weinstein@und.nodak.edu