

Contributors for Volume 38, Number 3

Marija Anna Bekafigo is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Southern Mississippi. Her research focuses on the US Congress and the intersection of politics and social media. She was the recipient of a Dirksen Congressional Research Grant in 2012 and has published in Social Science Computer Review, International Journal of Technology, Knowledge and Society, and Comparative Political Studies.

Jack M. Bloom was a graduate student activist in Berkeley in the mid- to late-'60s. He left Berkeley ABD in 1970 to be a full-time political activist. After some years, he wrote his dissertation and became a social movement scholar, rather than an activist. He is currently a Professor of Sociology and adjunct Professor of Minority Studies and of History, and he is chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Indiana University Northwest. He is author of the recently published Seeing through the Eyes of the Polish Revolution: Solidarity and the Struggle against Communism in Poland. He is currently working on the second edition of his prize-winning book Class, Race and the Civil Rights Movement.

Adam Chamberlain is an assistant professor of politics at Coastal Carolina University. His research, which focuses on public opinion, political parties, and political history, has appeared in outlets such as Public Opinion Quarterly, State Politics & Policy Quarterly, and Social Science Quarterly.

Aaron Major is an associate professor of sociology at the University at Albany–SUNY. His 2014 book, Architects of Austerity: International Finance and the Politics of Growth, examines the role that central banks have played in shaping domestic economic policy since the 1960s.

Josh McCabe is a PhD candidate in the sociology department at the University at Albany–SUNY and adjunct instructor at Emmanuel College in Boston. His research interests include fiscal sociology, social policy, and social movements.

Tatishe M. Nteta is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. His research is situated within the subfield of American politics and examines the impact that the sociopolitical incorporation of the nation's minority population has on public opinion, political behavior, and political campaigns. His work has appeared in Political Psychology, Political Communication, American Politics Research, National Political Science Review, and Social Science Quarterly.

Daniel C. Reed is an assistant professor of government at American University, in Washington DC, where he teaches courses in interest groups, political parties, elections, and research methods. He received his MA and PhD in political science at the University of Georgia. Professor Reed's research focuses on parties and interest groups, elections, and election and campaign finance law. His most recent research examines the historical development of US ballot laws and their effects on voter mobilization, third parties, and voter turnout over time.

Contributors for Volume 38, Number 4

Mariola Espinosa is associate professor of history at the University of Iowa. Her 2009 book, Epidemic Invasions: Yellow Fever and the Limits of Cuban Independence, 1878–1930, was awarded the 2007 Jack D. Pressman-Burroughs Wellcome Fund Career Development Award of the American Association for the History of Medicine. In 2010 she was recognized as the 2010 Virginia and Derrick Sherman Emerging Scholar. Her research interests lie in the study of medicine and public health in the Caribbean. She is working on a book project that looks into medical understandings of fever in the British, French, Spanish, and U.S. Caribbean empires.

Dan Lainer-Vos is assistant professor of sociology at the University of Southern California. He uses insights from science and technology studies to study nation building. His first book, Sinews of the Nation: Constructing Irish and Zionist Bonds in the United States (2013), examines financial encounters between national movements and diaspora communities to understand how diverse groups negotiate their positions in the nation. His work has also appeared in Sociological Theory, Theory and Society, Organization Studies, Men and Masculinities, Sociology Compass, and Mobilization.

Paul F. Lipold is an independent scholar residing within the Greater Cleveland, Ohio region. He earned his PhD in sociology from Florida State University in 2003. His primary research interests involve attempts to elucidate the configuration, causes, and consequences of fatal violence, especially within and against the American labor movement. Collaborative efforts with Larry W. Isaac have thus far appeared in the International Review of Social History (2009) and Current Perspectives in Social Theory (2012).

Peter B. Owens is a PhD candidate in sociology at the University of California, Irvine. His primary research interests lie in the areas of social movements, collective violence, historical sociology, culture, and formal qualitative methodology. His dissertation research, supported by the National Science Foundation, explores the structural and meso-level bases of settler violence against indigenous peoples in nineteenth-century California. He is also involved in an ongoing comparative project focusing on varying white responses to civil rights challenges in Mississippi and North Carolina.

Paolo Parigi is an assistant professor of sociology at Stanford University. He is interested in the mechanisms that produce cooperation and trust. Parigi's work spans several subareas including historical and political sociology, organization theory, and computational social science. He is the author of The Rationalization of Miracles (2012).

Dolores Trevizo is professor of sociology at Occidental College where she helped to establish the Latino/a and Latin American Studies program. She is the author of Rural Protest and the Making of Democracy in Mexico, 1968–2000. She has a forthcoming chapter on the militarization of law enforcement in Mexico, Colombia, and Brazil and has also published on Mexican immigrant entrepreneurs in Los Angeles. At Occidental she teaches courses on political sociology, social movements and revolutions, theory, democratization, human rights in Latin America and also on immigration from Mexico and Central America to the United States.

Andrew G. Walder is Denise O’Leary and Kent Thiry Professor, School of Humanities and Sciences, Stanford University, where he teaches in the Department of Sociology. He is also a Senior Fellow in Stanford’s Freeman-Spogli Institute for International Studies. He is the author of Fractured Rebellion: The Beijing Red Guard Movement (2009).

SOCIAL SCIENCE HISTORY

VOLUME 38 | NUMBERS 3&4 | Fall/Winter 2014

ARTICLES

Daniel C. Reed

- Reevaluating the Vote Market Hypothesis:
Effects of Australian Ballot Reform
on Voter Turnout* 277

Marija Anna Bekafigo

- How is Leadership Exercised in the US House? Party
Leaders' and Committee Chairs'
"Actions"* 291

Adam Chamberlain

- Voter Coordination and the Rise of the Republican Party: Evidence from
New England* 311

Aaron Major and Josh McCabe

- The Adversarial Politics of Fiscal Federalism:
Tax Policy and the Conservative Ascendancy
in Canada, 1988–2008* 333

Jack M. Bloom

- Political Opportunity Structure, Contentious
Social Movements and State-Based Organizations: The Fight against Solidarity
inside the Polish United Workers Party* 359

Tatishe M. Nteta

- The Past is Prologue: African American Opinion
toward Undocumented Immigration* 389

ARTICLES

Peter B. Owens

- The Collective Dynamics of Genocidal Violence in Cambodia, 1975–1979* 411

Mariola Espinosa

- The Question of Racial Immunity to Yellow Fever in History and Historiography* 437

Dan Lainer-Vos and Paolo Parigi

- Miracle Making and the Preservation of Charisma* 455

Dolores Trevizo

- Political Repression and the Struggles for Human Rights in Mexico: 1968–1990s* 483

Andrew G. Walder

- Rebellion and Repression in China,
1966–1971* 513

Paul F. Lipold

- "Striking Deaths" at their Roots: Assaying
the Social Determinants of Extreme
Labor-Management Violence in US
Labor History—1877–1947* 541

Cambridge Journals Online

For further information about this journal please go to the journal web site at:
journals.cambridge.org/ssh

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS