Dynamics of Communism in Eastern Europe

By R. V. Burks

Who are the people comprising the Communist movement in Eastern Europe? What is their motivation in joining the party? In a comparative analysis of the eight East European Communist parties — Polish, Czech, Magyar, Romanian, Bulgarian, Yugoslav, Greek, and Albanian — R. V. Burks offers precise knowledge about Communism's adherents. The author conducted interviews with repentant Communists held in Greek prisons, with exiled members of the party; he also made a critical analysis of election returns and of original sources in a dozen languages. The result is a wealth of specific information on the participants' age, sex, education, professional training, social class, and ethnic origin.

The Political Context of Sociology

By LEON D. BRAMSON

In looking at sociology from the viewpoint of the intellectual historian, Mr. Bramson examines several branches of sociology, pointing out various political ideas to which sociologists have been committed, and indicates how these ideas have influenced sociological research of the 19th and 20th centuries. Exploring recent and classical writings in mass sociology, he digs beneath the accepted assumptions. This book will antagonize some sociologists, but it contributes to that discipline by providing a "sociology of sociology."

Small Groups and Political Behavior:
A Study of Leadership

By SIDNEY VERBA

Students of small group analysis have developed great skill in the creation of experimental group situations in which the interaction among individuals can be carefully controlled, observed, and measured. It is Mr. Verba's thesis that these theories and methods can be applied to the study of politics to increase our understanding of basic political relationships. Since there are great problems involved in applying knowledge derived from experimental studies to actual political situations, the author extensively explores both the uses and limitations of this tool.
