

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

ERHARD BLANKENBURG is Professor of Sociology of Law at the Free University of Amsterdam. He has published books on the police, state prosecutors, civil courts, labor courts, and access to law, all of which have been based on empirical studies conducted in Germany. Blankenburg is among the editors of the Zeitschrift für Rechtssoziologie and the Jahrbuch für Rechtssoziologie und Rechtstheorie.

GREGORY A. CALDEIRA, Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Iowa, received his Ph.D. from Princeton University. His current research focuses on networks of communication between state supreme courts, longitudinal analysis of the Supreme Court, and the impact of judicial policy making.

HELEEN F.P. IETSWAART received her J.S.D. from Yale University in 1977. She has taught and conducted research in Africa and Latin America. She currently resides in Paris, where she serves as consultant to the French Ministry of Justice on problems of delegalization and informalization.

RICHARD LEMPERT teaches at the University of Michigan Law School. He is co-author of A Modern Approach to Evidence and is currently working on a text on the sociology of law. Beginning with Volume 17, he will become editor of the Law & Society Review.

THOMAS D. MORRIS is Professor of History at Portland State University, teaching courses in American constitutional and legal history. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Washington in 1969. Morris is the author of Free Men All: The Personal Liberty Laws of the North. His current research is concerned with the law of slavery.