Judas at the Jockey Club and Other Episodes of Porfirian Mexico

By William H. Beezley

"The author succeeds admirably in opening a window to the minds of turn-of-the-century Mexicans pursuing the elusive idea of progress. A delightfully written, unique example of what social history is about." – Library Journal.

"It is impossible not to like the book and to learn from it. Important but neglected themes of Mexican history (e.g., sport) are rescued and, what is more, related to a stimulating thesis concerning Mexico's development during crucial prerevolutionary years." – Southwestern Historical Quarterly.

"Witty, entertaining, and thought-provoking." – Thomas Benjamin, American Historical Review.

"William Beezley significantly adds to our understanding of elite and folk culture in Mexico during the Porfiriato." – Harold E. Hinds, Jr., The Americas.

Sexuality and Marriage in Colonial Latin America

Edited by Asunción Lavrin

This collection of original essays, the first in English to explore sexuality and marriage in colonial Latin America, examine the variety of sexual expression in different periods and among persons of different social and economic status, the relations of the sexes as proscribed by church and state and the various forms of resistance to their constraints, the couple's own view of the bond that united them and of their social obligations in producing a family, and the dissolution of that bond. Topics infrequently explored in Latin American history but discussed here include premarital relations, illegitimacy, consensual unions, sexual witchcraft, spouse abuse, and divorce.

From Alms to Liberation

The Catholic Church, The Theologians,
Poverty, and Politics

By Werner Levi

By comparing broadly similar situations of poverty in 19th-century Europe and 20th-century Latin America, Levi concludes that, in its reluctance to go beyond rhetoric in dealing with poverty, the church may lose the loyalty of its Third World constituency in much the same way as it lost the loyalty of the labor movement in the 19th century.

A Century of Debt Crises in Latin America

From Independence to the Great Depression, 1820–1930

Carlos Marichal

Carlos Marichal contends that the boom-and-bust cycles of Latin American foreign loans result mainly from the fluctuations of the world economy, rather than from errors made in Latin America itself. Marichal shows that the present debt crisis is only a part of an overall pattern in Latin American history.

Examining the strategies of both lenders and borrowers, he also makes it clear that foreign loan negotiations are not only financial tools but also political instruments with broad economic and social consequences.

Riot, Rebellion, and Revolution

Rural Social Conflict in Mexico

Edited by Friedrich Katz

Is Mexico's rebellious peasant fact or legend? This is one of the main questions addressed by the international group of scholars whose work is gathered in this volume. The authors offer a unique perspective not only on Mexican riots, rebellions, and revolutions through time but also on Mexican social movements in contrast to those in the rest of Latin America.

The Politics of Earthquake Prediction

Richard Stuart Olson, with Bruno Podesta and Joanne M. Nigg

The Politics of Earthquake Prediction is a suspenseful account of what happens when scientists predict an enormous earthquake for a specific day—an earthquake that did not happen, but which, if it had, would have been one of the most destructive of our century. This book is a fast-paced but thorough and sensitive description of how this scientific dispute became a political controversy, both in the U.S. and in Peru (the predicted site).

TEJANOS AND THE NUMBERS GAME
A Socio-Historical Interpretation from the Federal Censuses,
1850-1900

Arnoldo De León & Kenneth L. Stewart

The dictum that history is all in the telling applies especially well to this volume. Using federal census records, the authors compare residence patterns, marriage age, birth rates, family size and structure, and occupations of Anglos, Tejanos, and recently arrived Mexicans. From their analysis emerges a wholly new version of nineteenth-century Tejano daily life as fundamentally diverse and complex.

UNTOLD SISTERS
Hispanic Nuns in Their Own Works
Electa Arenal & Stacy Schlau
Translations by Amanda Powell

The writings of Old and New World Hispanic nuns of the sixteenth to eighteenth centuries have been inaccessible and unknown to the reading public until now. The nuns' works are elaborately worded to render ambiguous and acceptable the feelings of women who chose the relative freedom and autonomy of the convent over the restrictions of family life. These courageous women frequently participated in the political and religious life of their time, skillfully manipulating the male hierarchy and sometimes suffering for their words.

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

ALEJANDRO PORTES is Professor of Sociology and International Relations at the Johns Hopkins University and is currently a visiting professor at Florida International University. During the last decade, he has worked on issues of international migration, the informal economy, and comparative urbanization. His most recent books are The Informal Economy: Studies in Advanced and Less-Developed Countries (coedited with Manuel Castells and Lauren Benton), and Immigrant America: A Portrait (coauthored with Ruben G. Rumbaut).

VICKY UNRUH is Assistant Professor of Spanish at the University of Kansas, where she teaches Latin American literature. She has published a number of articles on Latin America's literary avant-garde movements and on twentieth-century narrative and theater. She is currently writing a book-length collection of essays on Latin America's literary avant-gardes of the 1920s and 1930s.

ROBERTO P. KORZENIEWICZ is currently teaching at the Department of Caribbean and Latin American Studies of the State University of New York–Albany. He is also writing a book on the development of labor unrest in Argentina from 1887 to 1976.

JOHN D. FRENCH is Assistant Professor of History at Florida International University. His recent dissertation will appear in substantially revised form as The Workers' ABC: Class Conflict and Alliances in Twentieth-Century São Paulo. His current research projects deal with women and politics in São Paulo, marriage choice in the ABC region, and the nature of police repression in the state of São Paulo.

JOSEPH L. LOVE is the author of São Paulo in the Brazilian Federation and Rio Grande do Sul and Brazilian Regionalism. He recently edited, with Nils Jacobsen, Guiding the Invisible Hand: Economic Liberalism and the State in Latin American History.

VERENA STOLCKE is Professor of Social Anthropology at the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. She studied at Oxford University and has also taught at the Universidade Estadual de Campinas in São Paulo. Her most recent book is Coffee Planters, Workers, and Wives: Class Conflict and Gender Relations on São Paulo Plantations, 1850–1980.

MAURICIO A. FONT is Associate Professor of Sociology at Queens College and Graduate School, CUNY. He has conducted extensive research on the role of coffee in Brazilian society and has initiated a comparative study on the relationship between export-sector expansion and social change. His main book on the Brazilian case, Coffee, Contention, and Change, is in press with Basil Blackwell.

JOHN SHEAHAN is the William Brough Professor of Economics at Williams College. He has done economic advisory work, research, and teaching in Colombia, Mexico, and Peru.

SEBASTIAN EDWARDS is Professor of Economics at UCLA and a research associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research.
