Recent modules

Family interventions in psychosis

People with psychosis experience difficulties with social functioning; however, many will have informal caregiving relationships with relatives, particularly at first onset. The NICE clinical guidelines recommend family interventions for patients in regular contact with families, as well as supportive interventions for carers themselves. This module provides an overview of the impact of the caregiving role and the clinical needs of people with psychosis who have regular contact with their families. CPD credits: 1

Cultural psychiatry

Mental health and illness are subjective experiences and a social process; thus, culture plays a crucial role in clinical presentation, assessment, treatment, planning and adherence. In this module you will find out what cultural psychiatry is and explore how culture relates to mental health. You will also learn about the influence of culture on psychopathology and gain a better understanding of the use of cultural information in clinical decision-making. CPD credits: 1

Boundary violations and sexual exploitation: recognition, avoidance and management

All clinical professionals need to comprehend and work within professional boundaries. Doctors must understand, observe and respect them, as all violations pose a risk of harm to patients. This module uses case examples to help you identify good practice in doctor-patient relationships, recognise and describe boundary violations and their associated harms, and learn how to avoid such situations or to manage them if they occur. CPD credits: 1.5
