In this issue

Edward P. Echlin, S.J.

author of The Anglican Eucharist in Ecumenical Perspective and The Deacon in the Church and chairman of the committee of the Catholic Theological Society of America which recently reported on the permanent diaconate, puts the case for the recognition of the Anglican Church as a Church of distinct rite in communion with Rome alongside the Roman Catholic Church—separate but equal.

Edmund Hill, O.P.

looks at another kind of separate development and hopes against hope for another kind of dialogue. Peter Hain, he says, is the man who understands how to dialogue with Mr Vorster but what is really needed is dialogue between white and black South Africans. He believes that dialogue between South Africa and Black Africa could open the way to this.

Michael Tatham

discusses John Fowles' The Collector and The French Lieutenant's Woman and suggests that he 'is writing a more unambiguously religious novel than has generally been supposed'.

Simon Tugwell, O.P.

concludes his series of articles with an account of the relation of contemplation to witness and to the whole Christian mission.

Frank O'Hara

considers linguistic translation as a possible model for understanding the incarnation.

Finally

Ian Gregor and Patricia Marshall

have been listening carefully to sermons and propose a new and instructive game for the man in the pew.

Eucharist and Eschatology

GEOFFREY WAINWRIGHT

This book will rank with G. Dix's Shape of the Liturgy and F. Clark's Eucharistic Sacrifice and the Reformation among the important works of eucharistic theology to be written in English since the Second World War. It gives the first full and satisfactory account of the relation between the eucharist and the rediscovered eschatology which, in its varying forms, has been a marked feature of twentieth-century theology. £5.00 (by post £5.20)

Foundations of Theology

A selection of Papers from the International Lonergan Congress 1970

Edited by PHILIP McSHANE

Articles on foundational problems in theology by leading thinkers from both sides of the Atlantic and Bernard Lonergan's own response to these articles. Among the contributors are Karl Rahner, Charles Davis, B. C. Butler, Charles Curran, Langden Gilkey, Frederic Crowe, Heinrich Ott, Quentin Quesnell, David Tracy, George Lindbeck. £3.50

The View from the Border

JOHN N. KOTRE

A social psychological study of current Catholicism. The "border" of the title is the dividing line between personal acceptance or rejection of the Church by Catholics.

This unique social psychological study provides some startling answers to the questions Roman Catholics are asking about those who leave the Church, those who remain in it, and those attempting to create a new Church within the Church. £3.50

Reason Revisited

SABASTIAN SAMAY

A comprehensive study of the philosophy of Karl Jaspers. The main aim of this work is to discover Jaspers' concept of reason which implicitly or explicitly governs all his reflections Available 17 September £3.50
