

About the Authors . . .

BERNARD BECK is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Northwestern University. Interested in societal responses to deviance, he is currently working on a comparative study of welfare policies in Sweden, the U. S., and Puerto Rico.

JONATHAN D. CASPER is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Yale University. His current research interests are in litigation as a political phenomenon and preceptions of the law and legal institutions.

MICHAEL COHEN is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Georgia. His major interests are in public administration, organization behavior and political process. He is co-editor with Robert T. Golembiewski of People in the Public Service (forthcoming).

JACK GIBBS, Professor of Sociology at the University of Texas, is currently on leave with the World Health Organization in Geneva. Well known for his studies of status integration and suicide, he has recently turned his attention to the problem of norm formation and sanction impact.

NORMAN LEFSTEIN is the Deputy Director, Legal Aid Agency for the District of Columbia. He is also a member of the Illinois and District of Columbia bars. One of his major interests is in legal aid, particularly for juveniles. He has served as project director for the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges and has lectured in Juvenile Courts and Delinquency at Northwestern University School of Law.

H. LAURENCE ROSS is a Professor of Sociology and Law at the University of Denver. He teaches a seminar on negotiation and is presently working on a manuscript entitled Perspective on the Social Order and is author of a forthcoming book entitled Settled Out of Court. His other interests are urban sociology and social deviance, particularly the study of drug use and sex deviance.

RALPH K. SCHWITZGEBEL, an Associate in Education at the Graduate School of Education at Harvard, is a Liberal Arts Fellow in Law and Social Relations at the Harvard Law School and a lecturer in the Department of Social Relations. He has served as the Director of the Streetcorner Research Project for the Social Relations Department. Among his publications are Reducing Adolescent Crime in Your Community: A Handbook, with C. W. Slack; Techniques of Probation; and Streetcorner Research: An Experimental Approach to the Juvenile Delinquent.

VAUGHAN STAPLETON is a Research Fellow in the Russell Sage Program in Law and Social Science at the Yale Law School and Visiting Lecturer in the Department of Sociology at Yale. During the previous three and a half years he served as Research Director of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges. He is currently engaged in an analysis and write-up of data generated by this project. He plans to return to Israel to resume a prior interest in problems of law and social change in that country.

LEE TEITELBAUM is an Assistant Professor of Law at the University of North Dakota School of Law. He has served previously as a staff attorney to the Chicago Lawyer Project, on a fellowship administered through the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges. Professor Teitelbaum's particular interest is in the area of juvenile court law and administration.

HANS ZEISEL was formerly a lawyer in Austria. He is now Professor of Law and Sociology at the University of Chicago Law School. He is the author of Say It With Figures, co-author of Delay in the Court and The American Jury. He has received the annual award of the American Association of Public Opinion Research. The citation began "Master of applied social research . . ."