

Exploring Africa's rich heritage

The Journal of Modern African Studies

The Journal of Modern African Studies offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa. The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; and upon the present, rather than the past. The best current work is presented from specialists in different academic disciplines. Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, but aims at a fair examination of controversial issues in order to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. The journal also includes an invaluable book review section.

The Journal of African History

The Journal of African History publishes articles and book reviews ranging widely over the African past, from the late Stone Age to the 1960s. In recent years increasing prominence has been given to economic and social history and several articles have explored themes which are also of growing interest to historians of other regions such as: gender roles, demography, health and hygiene, propaganda, legal ideology, labour histories, nationalism and resistance, custodial institutions, the construction of ethnicity, ideas of time, and photographs as historical sources. Contributions dealing with precolonial history are especially welcome. Articles on slavery, the slave trade and the interpretation of oral tradition are also included.

The Rockefeller Foundation African Dissertation Internship Awards

Doctoral students from sub-Saharan Africa are invited to apply to the Rockefeller Foundation for dissertation research support. The program enables Ph.D. students enrolled in U.S. and Canadian universities to return to Africa for extensive research involving field observation or the use of primary sources available only in Africa. Priority is given to research topics in the fields of agriculture, environment, health, life sciences, population, and schooling.

Applicants are responsible for arranging affiliation with an African institution able to provide needed research support, such as laboratory facilities, access to study sites, and technical advice. The candidate's faculty advisors, the host institution in Africa, and the agency with primary responsibility for financing the student's graduate work must all send letters of endorsement. The maximum award is $20,000. Deadlines for applications are October 1, 1995 and March 1, 1996.

Upon completion of their doctoral degrees, alumni of the ADIA program who return to Africa are invited to apply for Rockefeller Foundation African Science-Based Development Career Awards. Information on these awards is mailed with application materials for the ADIA Program.

For a full description of the competition and the application requirements, please write to: African Dissertation Internship Awards, The Rockefeller Foundation, 420 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY USA 10018-2702.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is presented from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.

Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyright, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material.
