CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

Christopher Bone is Assistant Professor of Modern Intellectual History at Washington State University, and has published articles in the Chicago Literary Review, Connections, and Aibion. A book, The Disinherited Children; A Study of the New Left and the Generation Gap, will be published this Spring by Schenkman.

Robert A. Huttenback is Professor of History and Chairman of the Division of the Humanities and Social Sciences at the California Institute of Technology. He is the author of British Relations with Sind, 1799-1943; An Anatomy of Imperialism; The British Imperial Experience; Gandhi in South Africa; and the co-author of Himalayan Battleground: Sino-Indian Rivalry in Ladakh.

Peter Jacobson is a graduate of Amherst College and holds the Ph.D. from Columbia University. He is now employed by the American Board of Trade.

J. W. Johnson is Professor of English at the University of Rochester. He is the author of The Formation of English Neo-Classical Thought, as well as articles in History and Theory, the Journal of the History of Ideas, and the Journal of British Studies. Currently he is completing a critical biography of John Wilmot, Earl of Rochester, and an edition of Rochester's dramatic writings.

W. R. Jones, Professor of History, University of New Hampshire, specializes in church history and medieval English legal history. He is the author of a monograph, "Relations of the Two Jurisdictions: Conflict and Cooperation in England during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries," in Studies in Medieval and Renaissance History, ed. William M. Bowsky; as well as articles in Comparative Studies in Society and History, Speculum, the Journal of the History of Ideas, and the Journal of British Studies.

Maurice Lee, Jr., is Professor of History at Douglass College, Rutgers University. His writings on Scottish history include James Stewart, Earl of Moray and John Maitland of Thirlestane. He is currently at work on a study of the political career of James VI's chancellor, Alexander Seton, earl of Dunfermline.

Jerrilyn Marston is a doctoral candidate in American history at Boston University. She is currently investigating the transfer of political authority from the British King to the American Continental Congress in the period 1774-1776.

F. K. Prochaska is Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Missouri-Columbia. He has published articles on eighteenth-century intellectual history and is currently working on the role of women in nineteenth-century philanthropy.
