GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LAW

Promoting excellence in University teaching and research

The University gained its Royal Charter in 1956. Leicester, a city located in England's central region is Britain's first Environment City and a thriving cosmopolitan community of 300,000.

The School's one-year modular Masters' programmes have been constructed on the basis of the strengths of teaching staff who have national and international reputations as researchers at one of the largest law schools in the United Kingdom. The School's teaching was rated as Excellent in the recent Government Assessment Exercise.

The Graduate School offers:

- small group teaching emphasizing research and communication skills
- modern library and computer facilities
- accommodation situated close to the campus
- visits from distinguished international guest lecturers
- assessment by coursework and dissertation

The Formative Years of the American Society of International Law
Frederic L. Kirgis	559
The American Society of International Law was founded in 1906 with the goals of promoting both the study of international law and the establishment of international relations on the basis of law and justice. In Annual Meetings and its Journal, the Society advocated codification of international law and establishment of permanent dispute-settlement institutions, in hopes of helping to prevent armed conflict between nation-states. Though temporarily set back by World War I, the Society has persevered in its mission through undertakings extending well beyond its original activities.
Drawing a Better Line: Uti Possidetis and the Borders of New States
Steven R. Ratner	590
This article examines whether new states emerging from recent dissolutions and secessions should assume borders coinciding with the internal administrative lines of the old state, according to the decolonization principle of uti possidetis. It explores the continued validity of uti possidetis by reviewing its history and nature, the functions of internal and interstate borders, and legal developments since the decolonization era. Highlighting the infirmities of uti possidetis as applied to these break-ups, the article offers an alternative set of principles for states to consider.
Rules of Origin and the Uruguay Round's Effectiveness in Harmonizing and Regulating Them
Joseph A. LaNasa III	625
Rules of origin, criteria for determining the nationality of a product, are used by countries to implement discriminatory trade regimes by treating similar imported goods differently. The author explains why firms should take account of rules of origin in calculating the costs of producing a good, a process requiring clear, precise rules. He then evaluates the various methods of determining origin, and assesses the effectiveness of the Uruguay Round's Agreement on Rules of Origin in making origin determinations more transparent, less controversial, and more certain.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

The American Society of International Law was organized in 1906 "to foster the study of international law and to promote the establishment and maintenance of international relations on the basis of law and justice." Society membership is open to all persons of whatever nationality and profession who are interested in its objectives. Dues are: regular, $95; special category, $55; intermediate, $65; student, $30. Sustaining Memberships—contributing ($180), supporting ($300), annual patrons ($750) and patrons ($7,500)—are also available. Corporations may join ASIL as institutional members ($2,000). Membership information is printed at the back of each issue of the AJIL.
