Jesus and the Living Past

Michael Ramsey

Christians believe that the story of Jesus of Nazareth has unique and universal significance for mankind and that the past to which they relate is a living past. There are difficulties felt about this claim at the present time. In this book the former Archbishop of Canterbury draws upon contemporary scholarship and his own experience of the problems of Christianity, and gives his reflections on some of the principal controversies of recent times. £3.50

All for Christ

Some Twentieth-Century Martyrs

Diana Dewar

It is not widely known that already in the twentieth century there have probably been more Christian martyrs than in all the previous centuries combined. In this book the author tells the stories of eleven of those who died as martyrs in the last forty years, all from different countries and cultures. £4.95 Oxford Paperbacks £1.95

The Existence of God

Richard Swinburne

The author examines the worth of arguments for and against theism and the claim that there is a God. He covers the important traditional arguments for the existence of God: the cosmological argument, arguments from design, from the occurrence of consciousness and moral awareness, and from the occurrence of miracles and religious experience; and also the arguments from evil against theism. £13

Creation and the World of Science

A. R. Peacocke

Dr Peacocke's aim is to discover a way of describing and explaining God's relation to the world in the context of the scientific perspective. Cosmology and other developments in twentieth-century physics, evolutionary biology and the role of chance, the scientific study of man and sociobiology, ecology, and scientific predictions of the future of the earth and of the universe are all examined to see what implications they have for the understanding of God's relation to the world. £10

New Books

The Tribes of Yahweh

NORMAN K. GOTTWALD

Fifteen years work have been put into this book, resulting in a unique and definitive study of the people of Israel during the formative period which preceded the monarchy. Professor Gottwald protests against the increasing tendency of Old Testament scholars to specialise in ever narrowing subject areas to the exclusion of any comprehensive perspective. In this scholarly, yet highly readable book, he uses sociological methods, in addition to those of biblical criticism, to reach an understanding of the form taken by early Israelite society and its beliefs.

The Method and Message of Jewish Apocalyptic

D. S. RUSSELL

'Here is a first-class treatment of the source and message of the apocalyptic literature of the period running roughly from 200 BC to AD 100. It consists of three parts: the nature and identity of Jewish apocalyptic; the method of Jewish apocalyptic and the message of Jewish apocalyptic... This is by far the most notable work in English on the apocalyptic literature for a long time' (H. H. Rowley in the Society for Old Testament Study Book List).

Jewish and Christian Self-Definition

Volume 1: The Shaping of Christianity in the Second and Third Centuries

E. P. SANDERS (Ed.)

This is the first volume of three in a series which examines the way in which Judaism and Christianity parted company in the second and third centuries. In the first century, both Jews and Christians retained a high degree of diversity, but over the next two centuries, both religions narrowed and began to exclude certain Christian or Jewish views in the process of normative self-definition. This first volume is concerned with Christianity and concentrates on its development from being a sect to becoming a church; its social setting and its attitude to outsiders.

Myths in the Old Testament

HANS GOTTLIEB, KNUD JEPPESEN AND BENEDIKT OTZEN

For many years the importance of the Scandinavian school on Old Testament studies has been recognised but little has been translated into English. This book traces the history of myth in Old Testament scholarship, in particular looking at the biblical accounts of Creation, The Fall and the Flood and their relationship to Babylonian mythology.

The Text of the Old Testament

ERNST WURTHWEIN

A basic introduction to the Old Testament, describing the formation of the Masoretic text and the main translations, illustrated by fifty plates, each with a commentary.

(March) £8.50

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. Contributions and books for review should be sent to the Editor, Professor H. D. Lewis, King's College, Strand, London, WC2R 2LS.
2. Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 5,000 and 10,000 words long, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two or more parts may occasionally be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible. They should normally be in English.
3. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere.
4. Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing, preferably on A4 paper, with a wide left-hand margin. The typescript should be prepared to accord as closely as possible with the typographical conventions of the journal.
5. Footnotes should be used sparingly: in general, to give sources of direct quotations, references to main authorities on disputable questions, and evidence relied on for a new or unusual conclusion. They should be numbered in one sequence throughout the article, and should preferably be typed in double spacing at the end of the article.
6. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
7. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where necessary, within ten days of receiving them.
8. Correction should be kept to an absolute minimum. It should be confined to errors of the typist or printer unless the Editor authorises otherwise.
9. All contributors of articles receive 50 free offprints. Reviewers will receive five or more offprints of their reviews.
10. If rejected manuscripts are to be returned, stamps or international coupons should be sent to cover postage, but it would normally be simpler just to retain a copy.
11. Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyrights, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
