

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

GEORGE F. COLE is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Connecticut. His main area of interest is judicial politics and he is currently doing active research on the politics and administration of criminal justice. He is the coeditor of a book entitled Micropolitics: Individual and Group Level Concepts.

ELMER E. CORNWELL, Jr. is Professor and Chairman of the Department of Political Science at Brown University. His publications include Presidential Leadership of Public Opinion, The American Presidency: Vital Center, and The American Democracy (coauthor). He is currently working on a study of the relationship between public opinion and the Prime Minister in Great Britain, as well as preparing a comparative study of state constitutional conventions with Professor Jay Goodman.

HOWARD S. ERLANGER, a student in the doctoral program in sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, is a research assistant at the Center for the Study of Law and Society there. His major interests are in the governance of private associations and the administration of criminal justice. He is presently engaged in research on the social organization of the District Attorney's office.

JAY S. GOODMAN, Chairman of the Department of Government at Wheaton College, is also a Research Associate in Political Science at Brown University. He is the author of numerous articles and books on American politics and government. He is currently involved in research on state constitutional conventions while actively serving, among other positions, on the state of Rhode Island's Democratic State Committee Advisory Council.

LUTAPIMWA L. KATO is Lecturer in the Faculty of Law at the University College, Dar-es-Salaam, Tanzania. He is currently doing research on the structure of negotiations between developed and underdeveloped nations as well as work on the strategy of economic development. His interests are in jurisprudence of the analytical type and political economy. He has published several articles on law in Africa.

WILLIAM N. LEONARD is Professor of Economics at Hofstra University. He has served as Consultant to the Secretary of the Interior, Consultant to the Federal Trade Commission and is presently Consultant to the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly. He has taught at Rutgers, Penn State, Connecticut, and New York University. His publications include numerous articles and books, such as Big Business, Market Power and Public Policy.

ANDREW C. MAYER is currently Assistant Chief, Resource Section, Public Land Law Review Commission. He holds an LL.B. from Yale Law School and an LL.M. from New York University. He also has served as Assistant Counsel, Office of Secretary of Defense and Legal Advisor, NATO Air Defense. He has reviewed books on international and comparative law, and is doing research concerning legislation in the public lands area.

EDWARD T. SILVA is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin. His main area of interest is political sociology and he is currently doing research on the sexual and racial aspects of the distribution of suffrage. He is the coauthor of a forthcoming book entitled The Social Organization of the Family, as well as several articles.

JOHN SPRAGUE is Associate Professor of Political Science at Washington University, St. Louis. He is interested in legislative and judicial politics, and has published Voting Patterns of the United States Supreme Court: Cases in Federalism, 1889-1959 and Lawyers in Politics (with Heinz Eulau). He is currently doing research on theory and analysis of legislative strategies and their consequences.

MARVIN G. WEBER is Assistant Professor of Sociology and Head of the Department of Sociology and Social Welfare at Mount Marty College, Yankton, South Dakota. He holds an M.A. in Sociology from Eastern Michigan University. He is a certified social worker and his main areas of interest are criminology, sociology of social welfare, and deviant behavior. He has published several book reviews and most recently coauthored an article called "A Study of Client Discontinuance in the Application Process" which will appear in The Rocky Mountain Social Science Journal.