

viction, and the book can be read as an evolution, the stages of which gradually approach that position. The biography is useful for a first – and then, not superficial – orientation.

OTHER BOOKS

DEDIJER, VLADIMIR. The Battle Stalin Lost. Memoirs of Yugoslavia 1948-1953. The Viking Press, New York 1971. 341 pp.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Bernard Barker is an assistant master at Haberdashers' Aske's School, Elstree (Herts.).

Sándor Agócs is Assistant Professor of History in Wayne State University, Detroit.

R. Bean is Lecturer in Economics in the University of Liverpool, Liverpool.

James D. Young is Lecturer in History in the University of Stirling, Stirling, Scotland.

N. L. Tranter is Lecturer in History in the University of Stirling.

George Garvy is Economic Adviser in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, New York.

R. H. MacNeal is Professor of History in the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.