Vilde Aaslid received a Ph.D. in critical and comparative studies of music from the University of Virginia in 2014 with a dissertation titled “Interaction, Collaboration, and Improvisation in the Intersection of Jazz and Poetry.” She is continuing her research on improvisation and text in experimental music and is researching and performing the traditional hardangerfiddle music of Norway.

Paul Bertagnolli is an Associate Professor of musicology at the University of Houston’s Moores School of Music. His publications have focused on program music and other forms of musical representation, including Prometheus in Music: Representations of the Myth in the Romantic Era (Ashgate, 2007) and articles or chapters in 19th-Century Music, Journal of Musicology, Journal of the American Liszt Society, 19th-Century Choral Music (Routledge, 2012), the Oxford Handbook of Atheism (2014), and conference proceedings related to Franz Liszt and Joachim Raff.

Robert Fallon is an Assistant Professor of musicology at Carnegie Mellon University. With Christopher Dingle he co-edited the two-volume set Messiaen Perspectives (Ashgate, 2013). He has published widely on the music and thought of Olivier Messiaen and is currently writing a book about place in American classical music since 1940. He holds degrees from Northwestern University and the University of California, Berkeley.

Maria Cristina Fava is a visiting Assistant Professor at the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester. Her research considers the social, economic, political, and intellectual contexts of American musical life in the twentieth century, including film music and the effects of McCarthyism on film music composers. Her work has appeared in the Italian musicological journal Musica/Realtà, and she is currently editing essays on the Composers’ Collective of New York and on Marc Blitzstein. She has presented her research at national and international conferences, including the American Musicological Society and the Society for American Music.

Eric Hung is an Associate Professor of music history at Westminster Choir College of Rider University in Princeton, New Jersey. His research focuses on Asian American music, recent Chinese music, music and new media, public musicology, and contemporary music inspired by Balinese gamelan. Current projects include a book on cultural trauma in Asian American music, and articles on parody videos of “Gangnam Style” and Tan Dun’s The Map. Hung is a pianist and a performer of Balinese gamelan and erhu.

Loren Kajikawa is an Assistant Professor of ethnomusicology and musicology at the University of Oregon's School of Music and Dance. His main area of research and teaching is American music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. His forthcoming book, Sounding Race in Rap Songs (University of California Press), explores the relationship between stylistic change and the production of racial identity in hip hop and rap music.

Tammy L. Kernodle is a Professor of musicology at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. Her teaching and research focus on many genres of African American music, and her publications appear in a number of anthologies and journals such as the Journal of the Society for American Music, Black Music Research Journal, American Studies Journal, U.S. Catholic Historian, and Musical Quarterly. Her book Soul on Soul: The Life and Music of Mary Lou Williams (Northeastern University Press, 2004) is the most current biography on the jazz musician.

John Koegel, a Professor of musicology at California State University, Fullerton, researches Mexican music, musical theater, American immigrant musical life, and circus music. His book Music in German Immigrant Theater: New York City, 1840–1940 (University of Rochester Press, 2009), won the 2011 Irving Lowens Book Award from the Society for American Music. His current project is a book on Mexican musical theater in Los Angeles, circa 1910–1940, supported by a National Endowment for the Humanities Research Fellowship (2013–14). Koegel serves on the Society for American Music Board of Trustees.

Panayotis (Paddy) League is a Ph.D. candidate in ethnomusicology at Harvard University. His research focuses on music, oral poetry, and dance in the Greek diaspora as well as the diatonic button accordion at rural festivals in northeastern Brazil. He has published articles in scholarly forums such as Classics@, the online journal of Harvard's Center for Hellenic Studies; the online Portfolio of the Department of Musicology and Ethnomusicology at Boston University; and Forum Folkloristica. He also performs Greek, Irish, and Brazilian music on the fiddle, accordion, various lutes, and percussion.

Kenneth H. Marcus teaches European, American, and world history at the University of La Verne and chairs the International Studies program. He has published two books, notably Musical Metropolis: Los Angeles and the Creation of a Music Culture, 1880–1940 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2004), and more than forty articles, book chapters, encyclopedia entries, and book reviews on subjects ranging from California cultural history to music patronage in early modern Germany.

Matthew Mugmon is an Assistant Professor of musicology at the University of Arizona. He completed his Ph.D. in historical musicology at Harvard University in 2013. His research centers on musical modernism in the United States and in Europe, with a special focus on the reception of Gustav Mahler's music. His articles appear in Music & Letters, Journal of Musicological Research, and the forthcoming volume Rethinking Mahler.

Marilynn Jean Smiley is an Emeritus Professor at the State University of New York at Oswego, where she was a Distinguished Teaching Professor in music history and literature. She earned a B.S. degree from Ball State University, an M.M. from Northwestern University, and a Ph.D. in musicology from the University of Illinois. Areas of research are in Renaissance music, American music, and women's studies, and she is an active member of SAM, AMS, AAUW, and several historical societies. She also directs and plays in a recorder consort.

Sabra Statham is digital project coordinator for the People's Contest Civil War Era Digital Archive at the Penn State University Libraries. She is a graduate of the CUNY Graduate Center and has published most recently on George Antheil, Civil War song, and music publishing in the United States during World War II.

Aaron Ziegel is an Assistant Professor of music history and culture at Towson University, where he teaches courses on American music and Western music history. His primary research explores American operas from the early decades of the twentieth century, and he has published articles on composer Vernon Duke and on film scores by Philip Glass and George Auric. He holds degrees from the University of Illinois and the University of Cincinnati, College-Conservatory of Music.
