Contributors

Jonathan W. Bernard is Professor of Music Theory at the School of Music, University of Washington. His articles on Varèse, Bartók, Carter, Messiaen, Ligeti, Zappa, Feldman, minimalism, the history of theory, and the history of twentieth-century compositional practice have appeared in numerous scholarly journals and anthologies. He is the editor of Elliott Carter: Collected Essays and Lectures, 1937–1995 (University of Rochester Press) and Joël-François Durand in the Mirror Land (University of Washington Press).

Nicholas Michael Butler received a Ph.D. in musicology from Indiana University and now works as an archivist and historical consultant in Charleston, South Carolina. His research and writing focus on the transmission of various aspects of European culture to the southeastern United States in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. He is the author of Votaries of Apollo: The St. Cecilia Society and the Patronage of Concert Music in Charleston, South Carolina, 1766–1820 (University of South Carolina Press, 2007).

Mervyn Cooke is Professor of Music at the University of Nottingham (U.K.). He has published many monographs and edited symposia in the fields of twentieth-century opera, Britten studies, jazz, and film music. Most recently, his History of Film Music was published by Cambridge University Press in 2008, and his Hollywood Film Music Reader was published by Oxford University Press in 2010.

J. Michele Edwards, musicologist and conductor, is Professor Emerita of Music, Macalester College. Her research interest is women making music with a focus on twentieth- and twenty-first-century music, Japanese musicians, Fluxus, and Asian choral repertoire. She has served as conductor for the Macalester Festival Chorale, Calliope Women's Chorus, and Minnesota Center Chorale and has conducted ensembles ranging from musical theater productions to professional orchestras and a professional double woodwind quintet and piano ensemble.

Terry B. Ewell has served as president of the International Double Reed Society and chairperson of the music programs at Towson University and West Virginia University. He has recorded for Musical Heritage Society, Hong Kong Records, Pickwick Records, and Cambria Records. He is a pioneer in the application of technology to bassoon instruction, having placed materials on YouTube, www.2reed.net, and www.idrs.org.

Sandra Jean Graham founded the graduate program in ethnomusicology at the University of California, Davis (2002–10), and has held visiting professorships at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, University of Ljubljana, and University of Zagreb. Her forthcoming book, From Slave Song to America's Music:

The Popularization of Negro Spirituals, will be published by University of Illinois Press.

Robert R. Grimes, S.J., is Associate Professor of Music at Fordham University in New York City and dean of Fordham College at Lincoln Center. He was an AMS 50 fellow of the American Musicological Society and is the author of How Shall We Sing in a Foreign Land (University of Notre Dame Press, 1996).

Carol A. Hess, Professor in Musicology, teaches at Michigan State University, where she is also a core faculty member of the Caribbean and Latin American Studies Program. She is currently completing a book on Latin American music and Pan Americanism. Among other prizes, she has received the Lowens Article Award (1998) and the Robert M. Stevenson Award (2004) for excellence in Iberian music scholarship.

David Nicholls is Professor of Music at the University of Southampton. He has published widely on American music and is the author of two monographs, American Experimental Music, 1890–1940 (Cambridge University Press, 1990) and John Cage (University of Illinois Press, 2007).

Charles Sharp received his Ph.D. in ethnomusicology from UCLA in 2008. He currently teaches music courses at California State University, Fullerton. His dissertation examined experimental musics in Los Angeles from the 1960s to the present, and his work is centered on the philosophical examination of interpretation and identity. Sharp began playing Cantonese opera in San Francisco in the early 1990s and continues to perform both jazz and traditional Chinese music.

Victoria von Arx is Assistant Professor of Music at the University at Albany in Albany, New York. She is currently completing a book on the teaching of Claudio Arrau. She has taught at the University of Michigan–Flint, served as assistant editor of MUSA (Music in the United States of America), and was a contributing author to the International Dictionary of Black Composers.

Josephine Wright is Professor of Music and The Josephine Lincoln Morris Professor of Black Studies at The College of Wooster, where she chairs the Department of Africana Studies. She coauthored three books with the late Eileen Southern and served as editor of the refereed journal American Music from 1994 to 1997. In 2006 she received the Society for American Music's Distinguished Service Award.
