

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

JOHN BALDWIN is Lecturer in Judicial Administration in the Institute of Judicial Administration at the University of Birmingham, England. He holds degrees in social science from Birmingham and in criminology from Cambridge and Sheffield Universities. Recent work in the field of criminal justice includes coauthorship of Criminal Justice: Selected Readings (1978) and Jury Trials (1979).

BRADLEY C. CANON is Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. He has done research in the area of judicial processes, with particular emphasis on the impact of court decisions, and has previously contributed articles to Law & Society Review, as well as to political science journals and law reviews.

JAMES L. CROYLE, Assistant Professor of Political Science at Washington University in St. Louis, received his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1976. He has published articles on criminal trial courts and tort policy impact, and is currently researching the impact of appellate court policy changes on trial court outcomes in civil law areas.

DEAN JAROS is Professor of Political Science and Associate Dean of the Graduate School at the University of Kentucky. He has published on a variety of topics, and his articles have appeared in several major journals.

MICHAEL McCONVILLE is Lecturer in Law at the University of Birmingham, England. He holds law degrees from the Universities of London and Birmingham. He is coauthor of Negotiated Justice (1977) and Jury Trials (1979).

SALLY ENGLE MERRY, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Wellesley College, has published papers on urban social organization, ethnicity, and the articulation of legal spheres. She is currently working on a study of mediation as an alternative to adjudication in the context of an American urban community.

ROBERT L. RABIN is Professor of Law at Stanford Law School. He teaches administrative law and torts and has written widely in both fields. He is author of Perspectives on Tort Law (1976) and Perspectives on the Administrative Process (1979).

WARREN J. SAMUELS is Professor of Economics at Michigan State University. His research has been principally in the fields of law and economics, history of economic and jurisprudential thought, ideology, and public utility regulation. He is editor of the Journal of Economic Issues, has written Pareto on Policy, edited The Chicago School of Political Economy, and has contributed to journals in several fields.

DONALD R. SONGER, Assistant Professor of Political Science at Oklahoma Baptist University, has done research on Supreme Court certiorari decisions. He is currently studying the role of senators in the selection of judges for the United States District Courts and Courts of Appeal.